THREE KILLED, 20 SHOT DOWN IN PRISON RIOT

WHITTEMORE AIDS SUSPECTED LEADERS

BUILDINGS SET AFIRE AND GUARDS BEATEN

Dannemora, N. Y., July 22 (N.Y.W.N. S.).—For four riotous hours the toughest collection of criminals ever banded together in the State, led by more than 100 life-termers, held sway in Clinton prison here today, pillaging, wrecking and burning buildings in the hope that the smoke screen might enable them to break through the thin line of guards they had chased to the top of the surrounding walls.

The outbreak failed, but not until three convicts had been killed, more than twenty others shot, two guards beaten, fire had destroyed two workshop buildings, and the prison lighting system was in ruins.

Whittemore Gangsters Suspected.

Suspicion was attached to the Kraemer brothers, Dick and Leon, two inmates who were members of the Richard Reese Whittemore gang. They were credited with attempting to engineer two wholesale deliveries from the Dannemora institution in 1927. On these occasions prison authorities intercepted apparently harmless shipments to the prison only to find that the boxes contained pistols, ammunition and whisky, the three essentials for a bloody break for freedom.

The Kraemer brothers, who had been involved in a big diamond robbery with the Whittemore gang, were sentenced in 1924. Whittemore himself was hanged in Baltimore and the rest of the gang were convicted, some going to Dannemora and some to Sing Sing for long terms.

Prisoners were killed and wounded at the height of the turmoil, when, by forming human pyramids, they tried to meet the machine gun, rifle and shotgun fire of the guards and scale the 20-foot stone walls, armed with knives, pipes, hammers, chisels and similar weapons obtained from the prison shops.

Met By Hail of Lead.

As fast as the ringleaders climbed through the billowing smoke and appeared at the top of the walls, they were met by a hail of bullets that sent them tumbling down into the prison yard where nearly the 1,568 inmates were milling about yelling, fighting among themselves and hurling whatever missiles were handy at their keepers.

Shortly after noon, when they had been repulsed again and again, the convicts began a sullen retreat from the prison yard into the main building, leaving about two dozen of their number scattered about the debris-strewn battlefield. The barred doors of the building were locked, the outer gates were opened, firemen gathered from three nearby towns rushed in, the dead were identified, the wounded treated and the outbreak simmered down to the investigation stage.

None Make Escape.

A check-up showed that not a single prisoner had escaped and the preliminary investigation conducted by Warden Harry M. Kaiser indicated that the flare-up was deliberately plotted by a group of "incorrigible" lifers sent to Dannemora because they were too tough for Sing Sing and the prison at Auburn.

Warden Kaiser said trouble had been in the air for weeks, fomented by many of the 118 men serving the rest of their natural lives for murder in the first degree or their fourth felony and some of the 400 or more others who have twenty-year stretches before them. The men have refused to work and have complained about the food, their living quarters and the discipline of the prison which is selected as quarters for the most dangerous convicts because its isolation renders escape extremely difficult.

Trio Is Identified.

The three dead convicts have been ringleaders, he said, identifying them as follows:

Harold F. Brunner, 33, of Tioga, Pa., sentenced from Lewis County for life as a fourth offender on a larceny charge.

Clyde Shakelford, 30, of Albany, sentenced from Albany County for from twenty years to life, charged with murder, second degree.

The pride of Germany, the new North German-Lloyd liner Bremen, sailed July 16 and made a new mark for the transatlantic crossing. The old record was set by the Mauretania of the Cunard line and was 5 days and 3 hours for the westward crossing. The eastward crossing mark is held by the same ship and is 5 days 1 hour and 45 minutes. The new westward crossing record of the Bremen is 4 days 17 hours and 42 minutes.

LYNCHING IS FEARED; GUARD CALLED OUT

Alabama Units Are Mobilized as Mob Violence Threats Cause Alarm.

TRIAL TO START TODAY

Montgomery, Ala., July 22 (A.P.).—Alabama National Guard units were mobilized for the first time in upward of a decade today to prevent execution of threats of mob violence to a negro, charged with commission of a major crime.

Under orders from Gov. Bibb Graves to protect Lester Bouyer "at any hazard," two Birmingham guard units were to entrain there tonight for Montgomery, where early tomorrow they were to receive custody of the prisoner from Kilby prison authorities.

They will take Bouyer to Eufaula, in Barbour County, 90 odd miles southeast of here, and less than a dozen miles from Oayton, where indictments charging him with the murder of Jack Hines, Eufaula mechanic, and a statutory offense against Miss Beatrice Clark, Hines' companion, near Eufaula on the night of July 10, were returned today by a special grand jury. His trial is scheduled to open at a special term of court at 8:30 a. m tomorrow. The train is not expected to reach Eufaula until shortly before the scheduled opening of the trial.

The guardsmen will be accompanied by a squad of State law enforcement officers. They will remain with the negro from the time they receive him at Kilby until completion of the trial.

Reports from Barbour County authorities said the guardsmen probably will be called on to escort the negro back to Kilby in the event of conviction or out of the community if acquitted.

The detachments were called out by Governor Graves at the request of Barbour authorties who stated county and municipal forces would be unable to cope with the threatened situation. In responding with the order, the State's chief executive declared "there will not be a lynching in Alabama if I can prevent it."

Reports from Barbour County late today said everything was quiet al-

Mauretania's Mark Cut Down by Nearly Nine Hours.

German Liner Is Docked 4 Days and 17 Hours After Leaving.

New York, July 22 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—At 2:02 o'clock this afternoon the rakish giant, the North German Lloyd liner, Bremen, slid over the finishing mark at Ambrose Channel light vessel, ending the fastest voyage a merchant ship has ever made across the Atlantic—or any other sea or ocean.

She seized the speed crown of the seas by crossing from Cherbourg in 4 days 17 hours and 42 minutes. By 8 hours and 52 minutes she robbed the Cunard liner Mauretania of the Atlantic's blue pennant. The Mauretania, speed champion for 22 years, made her best time in September, 1927, when she crossed from Cherbourg to New York in 5 days 2 hours and 34 minutes.

Capt. Leopold Ziegenbein was smiling but very tired as he made the short run from Quarantine this evening and moored the new queen to her berth at Fifty-eighth street, Brooklyn.

"Splendid," he said of the trip "Splendid, everything was splendid—the ship, the engines and the weather."

His ship for the crossing averaged 27.83 knots, easily ahead of the Mauretania's previous westbound record of 25.6 knots. On his final spurt for the tape he drove his ship down the coast for a day's average of 29.6 knots, a speed of more than 34 land miles an hour—5 miles an hour less than the Twentieth Century Limited averages for her run from Albany to New York.

The new flier presents the most modern note in design. She is 938 feet long, with lines in her hull and superstructure that sweep into long, swift effects.

Her two funnels mark her as the most distinguished ship to enter the port. They sit squat and low on the hurricane deck, presenting the idea of swiftness and power. As a new idea, they are elliptically shaped.

The whole ship flows into swiftness. Her lines blend into a sharp cruiser stern, starting from a stem, raked somewhat like a clipper-bow, as found in the fastest cruisers and men of war.

REYNOLDS ON TRIAL FOR TRAFFIC DEATH

CHARGES DENIED BY HIM

London, July 22 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Richard Joshua Reynolds, 23-year-old American citizen living in London, said to be a son of the late R. J. Reynolds, tobacco magnate, and one of five heirs to a $50,000,000 fortune, went on trial at Old Bailey here today charged with manslaughter. He is accused of having been the driver of an automobile which May 14, last, struck a motorcycle being ridden by Arthur Reginald Graham along the Bath road near Slough, Buckinghamshire. Graham died three days later in Windsor Hospital of injuries received in the crash.

The prosecution alleged today that young Reynolds was drunk at the time of the collision. According to the testimony, Reynolds hired a green saloon car on the morning of May 14 and that night such a car was seen on the Bath road just before the crash that resulted in Graham's death. It was testified that the car which struck Graham's motorcycle carried it 42 feet after the collision, and that after the smash the automobile continued on its journey. Later, a Mr. Walker saw a car being driven zig-zag along a road in Chiswick, a London suburb. He took a policeman into his car and followed the other machine at a distance of about 2 miles until it stopped. Reynolds, the prosecution charges, was the driver of this car and was so drunk that when he tried to get out of it he fell down.

Reynolds denied being drunk at the time, but a police doctor at a police station to which he was taken said that he was drunk and unfit to drive. The prosecution charges that it was Reynolds' drunkenness which was the cause of Graham's death.

Gov. Gardner Called In Mill Strike Trial

Gastonia, N. C., July 22 (A.P.).—Gov. Gardner was subpenaed late today as a witness in the trial of 23 Loray mill strikers and strike sympathizers held in connection with the slaying of O. F. Aderholt, Gastonia chief of police, at the strikers' encampment on June 7. The trial is set for next Monday.

Intends to Close All Saloons in Italy, Says Premier.

New York, July 22 (A.P.).—Benito Mussolini, in an interview published in the August issue of the World's Work, is quoted as saying that, principally for economic reasons, he intends to cut down wine consumption by Italians.

"I have closed 27,000 saloons in five years," Il Duce is quoted as saying. "Give me time and I will close them all."

The interview with the dictator makes it clear that his program is designed to assist in making Italy self-sustaining. Italy, he is quoted as declaring, devotes 8,500,000 acres of land to vineyards, or more than half of the total vineyard acreage of all Europe, consuming the entire production within its borders and importing more, while it is unable to raise enough wheat to meet its own needs.

White House Guest Room Made Ready for Coolidge

Former President Arrives Tomorrow With Wife for Antiwar Pact Ceremony; Will Dine With Hoovers and May Spend Night; Press Conference.

Calvin Coolidge, for more than five years master of the White House, will return to the Executive Mansion tomorrow with an invitation to dine, talk and be at home in the guest room.

The former President and Mrs. Coolidge will dine with the Hoovers. Mr. Coolidge, who created his own mythical "White House spokesman," will talk as a private citizen in a White House press conference that has been arranged for him. The Coolidges have not indicated whether they will accept the President's invitation to remain overnight at the White House.

The Old Home Week atmosphere for the home-coming will be heightened by the presence of Everett Sanders and Edward T. Clark, the two secretaries who served with Mr. Coolidge in the White House. They are arranging details for everything except Mr. Coolidge's part in the ceremonies attending exchange of ratification of the Kellogg antiwar agreement in the famous East Room of the White House.

The East Room is being entirely renovated and redecorated for the ceremony, furniture being moved and rearranged to make room for a large number of invited guests.

Official Washington expects the former President to remain in Washington overnight as the only through train that could take the Coolidges back to Northampton, Mass., after the ceremonies leaves Washington early in the morning.

No other official engagements have been made for the Coolidges, who are expected to go direct to the White House from the train and return to their train in the same direct manner.

President Hoover yesterday completed the draft of the brief speech he will make on the occasion in which the Kellogg-Briand pact will become effective. The speech will be delivered immediately preceding reading of the proclamation of the treaty.

Frank B. Kellogg, former Secretary of State, whose name the treaty bears, and who arrived in Washington Sunday was invited Sunday to be a White House guest for the remainder of his brief stay in Washington.

HOOVER PLANS TO PUSH STATE DRY HELP IDEA

Governors to Be Prodded Until They Take Over Enforcement.

EXECUTIVE'S PARLEY IN CAPITAL IS HINTED

Law Commission Voices No Disagreement With Leader's Letter.

OPPOSITION OF DRYS EXPECTED TO GROW

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

The Hoover administration plans to keep after the State governors until they are shamed into taking over the business of local prohibition enforcement. The now famous Wickersham letter was intended as a start in this direction, President Hoover in speeches having already paved the way.

It is not unlikely—in fact, highly probable—that after one or two more such moves as the Wickersham letter that the President will call a governors' conference here. At any rate, it is known to be the determination not to let the governors side-step the question as they did at New London.

It was definitely made known yesterday that Mr. Wickersham intends to let his letter stew awhile before adding to or detracting from it. The law enforcement commission met for the first time since the letter was made public, eight of the eleven members being in attendance. There had been previous indications that it was not the commission's letter, simply Mr. Wickersham's own. But there was no evidence yesterday that any member resented it or was inclined to disagree with the sentiments it contained.

Plans Are Discussed.

The meeting, it was said, was given over to organization, or rather the best way to approach its work. Incidentally, it is about time for the commission to reach a conclusion on this.

But it is inconceivable that the chairman's letter was not discussed. The members were together all day, from shortly after 9 o'clock in the morning until after 5 in the afternoon.

Of more importance than its routine work, however, is the definite impression which the circumstances of Mr. Wickersham's letter gave that he has virtually carte blanche authority to proceed on prohibition as he sees fit. And this being so, the governors are in for some hard days.

To Get Responsibility.

It has been a long time since prohibition, the enforcement of it, has been a problem to them, save in the comparatively few States where it is always agitated. Insofar as the great number are concerned they have not even had to say whether they were wet or dry, it has just been assumed that they were the latter. They have long since stepped from under the burden or the responsibility for enforcement, though. The administration is determined, especially with the favorable response that it has received from the organized drys, to give the responsibility back to them.

It may be that when the organized drys learn the full significance of the program that they will lose some of their enthusiasm for it. Because the program contemplates a general decentralization of enforcement, and it would necessarily follow that the prohibition lobby be decentralized.

Legislatures Would Be Target.

Instead of camping on the footsteps of the White House and Capitol as is now the case it would have to direct its efforts at the several State legislatures. It would mean that instead of one Dr. Clarence True Wilson, Dr. F. Scott McBride and Deets Pickett here there would have to be little Wilsons, McBrides and Deets Picketts at every State capitol, and similarly little Henry H. Currans of the Association Against the Eighteenth Amendment.

The cost of prohibition lobbying would, of course, go up, but there would be a broader lobbying field and one affording opportunity to more people.

The decentralization of the lobby, however, is foremost in the ultimate aim of the entire plan. The President does not think that the administration should be held responsible for the lack of enforcement but that the several States should be looked to for it. The administration is prepared to take the responsibility of what it considers to be really the Federal Government's job, the prevention of smuggling, big manufactures and interstate traffic.

PROFFER OF FRENCH AID IS TURNED DOWN

Both Countries Renew Pledge to Use Force Only in Defense.

NANKING PREPARING NEW MOSCOW NOTE

Appeal to League Reported Planned If Kellogg Pact Proves Futile.

(Associated Press.)

The first attempt to settle peaceably the dispute between Russia and China has failed, although renewed assurances were given yesterday that neither country would resort to war unless overt acts were committed against it.

The government of the Soviet Union disclosed that France had offered its good services to mediate in the conflict growing out of dismissal by China of the Russian administration of the Chinese Eastern Railway in Manchuria. At the same time Russia announced it could not accept the offer because China had refused to restore the status quo that Russia demanded as a preliminary to negotiations.

Neutral observers in Peiping, on information from many sources, reached the conclusion there had been no clashes between Chinese and Russian troops on the frontier of Manchuria. Most of the rumors had come from Harbin, where they were accepted to the extent that Russian Consul General Meinikert was detained by the Chinese until the reports were investigated. He has now been released.

Renew Pledge to Pact.

The State Department in Washington received assurances from both the Chinese and Russian governments that they would abide by the Kellogg antiwar treaty and would countenance war only in self-defense. Simultaneously, the Japanese government advised that it was cooperating fully with Secretary Stimson, completing the unity in the crisis of the signatory powers of the Pan-Pacific treaty.

The Nationalist government of China was said to be prepared to seek intervention by the League of Nations if the Kellogg pact failed to hold the war dogs in leash.

Moscow, July 22 (A.P.).—The Soviet government announced tonight it had declined an offer by France to mediate in the Manchurian conflict.

This action was said to be due to refusal of the Chinese authorities to restore the status quo on the Chinese Eastern Railway in Manchuria as demanded in the Soviet note of July 13.

Soviet Makes Three Demands.

The Soviet note of July 13, to answer which China was given three days, demanded three things. One was that a conference be called immediately to regulate all phases of the dispute, another that the Chinese authorities immediately cancel all arbitrary orders regarding the railway and, lastly, that all Soviet citizens arrested should be released immediately and Soviet citizens and institutions protected henceforth.

The Chinese answered, just within the three days, with two demands calling for the release of all Chinese imprisoned in Russia and adequate protection for Chinese nationals.

Following delivery of this note, which was held to be unsatisfactory in Moscow, Russia broke off diplomatic relations with China and the latter took similar action on the following day.

Peiping, July 22 (A.P.).—While new moves were made today to maintain

WEDDING BELLS FOR FILM STARS

Wedding bells will soon be ringing for Sue Carol, left, motion picture actress, and Nick Stuart, also of the films, who yesterday admitted their engagement, long rumored in Hollywood, according to Associated Press dispatches. Miss Carol said it would be several months, however, before the nuptial ceremony takes place.

Manchuria Railway Dominates Building Up of Huge Empire

China and Russia Have Long Struggled to Control Carrier, Likened to Political State and Now Bone of Contention; Foreseen as Incentive to War.

This is the third and concluding special article on Manchuria based on United States Government reports.

By REGINALD P. MITCHELL.

Woven into the very warp and woof of Manchuria's life fabric is the Chinese Eastern Railway, Manchuria's main street, the crux of the belligerant situation in the Far East between China and Soviet Russia.

Its great importance can scarcely be visualized, for the few persons among the approximately 27,000,000 in the three Eastern provinces, as the region popularly is known, fail to come into contact daily either directly or indirectly with this great system and its widespread ramifications.

Its value in colonizing this vast northern territory and in making its own resources, and in part the buried wealth of an awakening continent beyond, available to the outside world is difficult to measure. For the reason that it manifestly has played so conspicuous a part in this unfolding drama of an almost truly the coveted Alladin's lamp of virgin land, the Chinese Eastern is Manchuria and its hinterland.

Connecting Vladivostok and the Pacific Ocean ports with the transsiberian railroad, the road forms a giant ribbon of steel running far westward to the distant ports of the Baltic and the North Seas. A pigmy line in comparison with some of America's great rail transportation organizations, the Chinese Eastern's actual mileage of 1,078, with spurs to timber concessions aggregating 286 miles additional, nevertheless commands a towering influence probably not equaled by any other railroad in the world.

Ever since its construction in an agreement in 1896 between China and Russia, the enterprise has been the dominant civic factor in the region. It has created cities and towns, over which it administered; it has maintained schools hospitals and until recently, churches. It has pioneered in the Harbin area and in North Manchuria in many branches of industry, with its sawmills, its plant for the dry distillation of wood, its parquet or wooden mosaic factory and its plant for the hydraulic press packing of wool and skins.

Rumblings of War Leave Chinese of Capital Cold

Depending Upon San Francisco Newspaper, Week Old When It Gets Here, for News, and Happy as Is, They Are Apathetic.

Chiang Kai-shek, the Chinese leader in the threatened war between China and Russia, need not expect any help from Washington's Chinatown in the event of hostilities.

A visit to the Chinese colony here yesterday made that clear.

Sun Sing, proprietor of a laundry at 317 Pennsylvania avenue, laid down his iron, and, emerging from a soapy back room, reluctantly submitted to an interview.

Through a series of grunts, Sun Sing made two things clear: First, he didn't know that there was a threat of war, and, second, he didn't give a Chinese whoop if there was.

The interview broke up when the reporter got personal. He wanted to know if there was any possibility that Sun Sing would go back to fight if war did break out. For answer, Sun Sing threw him an insulting look and padded back to his washing.

A dozen Chinese in the colony were interviewed after that. They were found smoking in the store of the Kim Lai Yuen Co., 325 Pennsylvania avenue; Wah Chong's grocery store, at No. 315, and the Hong Ai Importing Co., at No. 343.

Only one Chinese knew that any trouble was brewing, and his information was more than a week old. And herein lies a fact that partly explains Chinatown's apathy in the present crisis.

The Chinese along lower Pennsylvania avenue depend for their news almost entirely on a Chinese-language newspaper published in San Francisco, which by the time they read it is a week old. Thus they will have to wait to the end of this week before they know that the Russians fired at Chinese troops Sunday night.

Most of the Chinese here come from around Canton in southern China, and they are about as much interested in what goes on in northern Manchuria as a Mexican peon is in the affairs of an Alaskan seal fisherman.

Moreover, while the homeland may have been known as the celestial kingdom, the local Chinese conception of an earthly heaven is the 300 block of Pennsylvania avenue.

CAPITAL'S LIBRARY LOSES FEW BOOKS

1,578,422 USED IN YEAR

Library patrons in Washington are conscientious.

This on the word of Dr. George F. Bowerman, librarian of the Public Library. For while libraries in many parts of the country are experiencing great difficulty in getting back books loaned and are suffering considerable loss in consequence, the Public Library of Washington pursues the even tenor of its way with a total loss of less than one-tenth of 1 per cent.

The most recent figures, for the fiscal year 1927-8, reveal a total circulation of 1,578,422 volumes, either from the main library or branches, from which not more than 14,792 books were either lost or necessarily drawn from circulation. These figures are the more unusual since they include books loaned to children by the juvenile department, which takes no inventory.

Messenger Cost Exceeds Books.

At a conference held by the representatives of libraries throughout the country in Chicago recently Dr. Bowerman declared the number of books lost by his institution so few, in comparison with the number circulated, that it has often cost the library more to maintain a messenger service for the recovery of those books than the value of the books themselves.

Were it not for the fact that the Public Library has a duty to perform in safeguarding, so far as possible, Government property it would be more practicable to stand the occasional losses than to attempt a recovery of the books.

A few figures quoted by Dr. Bowerman showed the total circulation of the adult department of the Central Library, exclusive of branches, to be 370,000 volumes for the fiscal year 1924-25. Out of this number all were voluntarily returned by the holders within the time specified except 9,000 volumes, or about 2½ per cent. The mailing of letters of reminder to the delinquent holders further reduced the number of unreturned books to 2,079, or one-half of 1 per cent.

Warnings Summon Delinquents.

By resorting to telephone calls or mailing the "messenger card" threatening to dispatch a messenger to the homes of the holders, the number was reduced to 513, or one-fifth of 1 per cent. Finally the messenger service, or last resort of the library, succeeded in recovering all but 330. This left less than one-tenth of 1 per cent, unrecovered and a loss.

While the figures quoted were composed a number of years ago, the proportion of wastage has not materially changed, Dr. Bowerman declared.

The present policy of the library is to send letters of warning to holders of books one week overdue, and if there is no result to attempt to reach them by telephone before resorting to the messenger. The latter is sent perhaps to the home. If the delinquent is in Government employ an appeal may be made to the chief of bureau.

Attempts have been made by Dr. Bowerman to obtain passage of a law making it a theft punishable by fine, imprisonment or both not to return a book borrowed from a library within a definite time.

prowess. The robbers eventually left Miss Bannon and the automobile.

Today she called to identify him. She began to weep. He walked across the room to her and put him arm about her shoulder, saying, "Don't cry, Dolores; you're not afraid of me, are you?"

"He was a perfect gentleman," she said after she recovered her composure. "It was his partner who shoved his gun in my side and threatened to kill me if I made any outcry."

At the detective bureau he said:

"Remember an Evanston policeman that was slugged on April 30?"

Lieut. Farrell recalled that Policeman Alfred Carter of the Evanston force, had been almost killed.

"Well, I came up from behind him that night and pinned his arms while my partner got his gun. He showed fight until I laid him cold with the pistol butt and we trimmed him proper after he was down."

Carr has since been on sick leave and forced to use crutches.

Flier Hoyt Fatigued Winging Way Home

Nome Aviator Expecst He Will Be in New York Some Time Today.

White Horse, Yukon, July 21 (A.P.). Capt. Ross G. Hoyt, New York-to-Nome flier, landed here at 9 a. m. today on his return flight from Nome and took off again at 11 o'clock. He expected to reach Edmonton, Alberta, tonight and New York tomorrow.

Fairbanks Alaska, July 21 (A.P.).—Capt. Ross G. Hoyt, on his return flight from Nome to New York, landed here at 10:43 p. m. (11:43 Pacific standard time) last night. He intended to leave for White Horse, Yukon Territory, early today, sleeping here while his plane was serviced and refueled.

He appeared fatigued after the strenuous hop from Fairbanks to Nome, made in rain and fog and against head winds. The return from Nome was made in 3 hours and 43 minutes with the assistance of a strong tail wind. It took him 4 hours and 30 minutes to fly to Nome from here.

Dry Agents on Desert Are Saved by Goat Milk

Salt Lake City, July 21 (A.P.).—A desert is supposed to be a dry place, and that was what two Federal prohibition agents, who went out on the Great Salt Lake Desert in search of liquor, found it to be last week.

The agents, L. E. Hammond and Thomas Hendrick, became stranded on the hot wastes when their automobile broke down, and when they acquired a maddening thirst, the only liquid they could find was goat milk. It saved their lives, the officers declared upon the return at the week-end after five days of wandering with the mercury registering 100 degrees in the shade, where they was any. They learned that the still they went to look for had long since been abandoned.

BOND DEALINGS LAG IN WEEK'S MARKET

Interest Is Divided Between Convertible Rail and Industrial Issues.

NEW FINANCING SHRINKS

New York, July 21 (A.P.).—Trading lagged in the bond market during the last week, with United States Government securities under pressure all through the session. The Liberty 3½s sold at new low for the year.

The speculative stock privilege issues dominated the trading, but the turnover was considerably under that of last year. Interest was divided between the convertible rails and industrials, with new highs established by the leaders in both groups. The rails followed the movement of the stocks.

Money was firm most of the week. Time money rate held at 7¾ and 8 per cent for all maturities, while call money on Monday renewed at 9, rose to 12, and finished the week at 7.

Limited activity in the new financing market corresponded closely with the interest in the bond market as a whole. New bond financing dropped to nearly half last week's total. Offerings totaled $48,691,000, compared with $91,559,900 last week. Only offerings with attractive rates or conversion privileges are finding a ready market, and insurance companies, which are reported hungry for securities, are picking their purchases with exceptional care. Most of the bond houses are looking for a dull period next month, with activity picking up in September.

American I. G. Chemical 5½s, which were brought out earlier this year at 95, rose 12¾ points to a new top above 120. American International 5½s rose 4 points on the week. In the rail group Alleghany Corporation issues advanced more than 3 points each, with the 5s of 1949 selling at a new top above 110. Atchison 4½s rose nearly 5 and the New Haven convertible 6s were shoved into new high ground on a 6-point rise above 133.

Kreuger & Toll 5s carrying warrants were the feature of the foreign list, establishing a new high above 100. Its gain, however, was converted into a loss as the week closed.

Virginian Is Killed By Ohio Accident

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., July 21.—Russell B. Kirby, of Woodridge, this county, was accidently killed Friday at the plant of the Frigidaire Corporation at Dayton, Ohio, where he had been employed for only two months. While at work on a loading platform he was caught between a truck and a trailer when the latter broke loose and ran wild. His chest was crushed and he lived but a few minutes.

The body reached here yesterday afternoon over the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway, and was taken today to his former home at Woodridge, in southern Albemarle, where the funeral was held at 3 o'clock this afternon. The interment was in the family burying ground.

Mr. Kirby was a native of this country. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. James Kirby, and was 23 years of age. He never married. Besides his parents, he is survived by several brothers and sisters.

Several years ago Mr. Kirby resided in Lynchburg, where he was employed at a factory. Later he accepted a position in the big pulp mill at Covington, Va., where he made his home until two months ago.

Daily O'Currences

By JOHN DALY

"As a business man, Amos," asked Mrs. Warburton, "what do you think of the industrialization of Washington?"

Mr. Warburton took off his glasses, leaned back in his chair. "Can't say I know anything about it," he admitted.

"Here," said Mrs. Warburton, pointing to the newspaper. Adjusting his glasses, Mr. Warburton read: "The National Park and Planning Commission has given favorable consideration to a plan prepared by Capt. Edward N. Chisholm, jr., engineer of the commission, for the industrialization of Buzzard Point."

"Umph!" grunted Mr. Warburton.

"Buzzard Point," she repeated. "Sounds horrible!"

"Never heard of Buzzard Point," reflected Mr. Warburton, familiar as he was with Foggy Bottom, Swamp Poodle, Wesley Heights and other suburbs.

"It's down by the War College," she said, "south of the Gas House section on the river. Imagine calling it Buzzard Point."

"After all, my dear," remarked Mr. Warburton, a Northerner by birth, "Washington is a Southern city. Distinctly of the South. I don't believe they've ever seen a buzzard in dear old New England, God bless 'er!"

"Even so," she declared, "the buzzard is not a prepossessing bird, or one of sheer beauty, such as the turtle dove, the wren, or the Baltimore oriole. There should be a symbol in keeping with plans for beautifying Washington. Why not call it Peacock Point?"

* * * * *

"Ah," chuckled Mr. Warbirton, "but there are no peacocks in Washington. I mean as natives. Perhaps a few wild ones out in the Zoo, but——"

"There's a Peacock Alley in one of the big hotels," she recalled. "No hostelry would call its main promenade Buzzard Lane—and cater to society."

"Are they going to build a hotel at Buzzard Point?" he asked.

"If they do," she snapped, "they'd probably name it Buzzards' Roost. I do wish you'd take this up at the next meeting of the Rotary Club, Amos. Perhaps the Lions would be interested. They'd roar over Buzzard Point."

Mr. Warburton grew weary. "What's in a name?" he asked, trying to end the conversation. "Buzzard's good as anything else for a point about to be industrialized. In fact, the buzzard, as I recall it, is rather an industrious bird——"

She tapped her fan, nervously. "You never knew a buzzard to do anything but soar in the sun, hovering over something to eat, and too lazy to get down out of the sky even for that. I never saw such indolence!"

"And yet," ventured Mr. Warburton, "the buzzard is not far from being an eagle. In fact, there is a buzzard-eagle."

"Have you ever heard of the hen-hawk?" she asked. "That's really what a buzzard is, a hen-hawk. Find romance and beauty in a hen-hawk, then be satisfied with calling it Buzzard Point. Thank heaven I'm of an artistic nature."

* * * * *

"My dear lady," said her husband, "whatever they call it makes no difference to me. There's a place off Cape Cod called Buzzard Bay. If I remember correctly, one of the greatest men in this country thought a lot of it. I refer to the late Theodore Roosevelt."

Mrs. Warburton laughed. "You never could keep your facts straight, Amos. That was Oyster Bay. I suppose you'll be telling me next that Calvin Coolidge christened Buzzard Point in honor of the Republicans. I don't quite follow your line of reasoning."

"I have no line of reasoning whatsoever, dear," he admitted. "You put up a fight against the name Buzzard Point and I ask, 'What of it?' For all I care, they can rechristen it Cardinal Point, in honor of the Red Sox."

Mrs. Warburton was chagrined. "That's the trouble with you business men," she declared. "While women are trying to make this the most beautiful city in the world, men are going to industrialize a place called Buzzard Point."

Heartbroken, she bounded to her boudoir and had a good cry.

Policeman's Chase Ended by Hammer

One of Two Fleeing Liquor Runners Hurls Missile at Pursuer.

With the arrest of two fleeing rum runners almost in his grasp, Policeman George C. Deyoe, 30 years old, of the Tenth Precinct, was struck on the head by a hammer thrown by one of the liquor men about 11 o'clock yesterday morning at Ninth street and Barry place northwest.

Deyoe was dazed by the blow and the two men had fled by the time he regained consciousness, leaving their automobile behind. Deyoe said that the hammer which struck him had been used for breaking whisky bottles in the car. For a distance of several blocks, the policeman said, he had seen a man in the rear of the machine breaking the bottles and throwing them from the car.

At Ninth street and Barry place northwest, the two men stopped the car and one of them jumped out with a hammer. Policeman Deyoe was within a few yards of the man when the hammer was thrown. While Deyoe was recovering from the blow, the driver vacated the car and fled with the hammer-thrower. Police said they know the driver of the car and expect his arrest within a few hours. Deyoe received medical treatment at his home.

St. Anne to Be Honored With Solemn Triduum

A solemn triduum in honor of St. Anne, mother of the Virgin Mary, will begin tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock, in St. Aloysius Church, North Capitol and I streets and will close Thursday night, the eve of the saint's feast day. The Rev. James M. Cotter, of the Gonzaga College faculty, will officiate.

An authentic relic of St. Anne, 1900 years old and bearing the certification of the Vatican, will be presented by Father Cotter for veneration at each service. The relic consists of a fragment from the saint's hand. A triduum mass will be celebrated each morning at 7 o'clock.

Wandering Astronomer Visits Capital; Laboratory in Truck

David Phillips, "Faculty of Limitless College," Lectures Nightly on Wonders of Solar System; Has Covered Nearly 30,000 Miles and Exhibited to 40,000.

Being the faculty of a college with probably the largest student body on earth with a campus domed by a measureless abyss is David Phillips' idea of a fitting manner of ending his days. He is the proprietor of a traveling school of popular astronomy and has arrived in Washington for a stay of about a month.

Born in Massachusetts, he soon felt the urgings of the wanderlust and when a mere stripling set forth on the trail of adventure. He has prospected in most Western States and when the Klondike fever struck him he set forth to discover new fields. He had invented a method of thawing the ground so that work could continue in winter but found that his idea didn't work so well and he returned to Montana.

About seven years ago he bought a telescope and was filled with an urge for sky-wandering. For two years he studied the heavenly bodies and then came a brilliant idea. Why not make his hobby his life work. Forthwith he set forth in a flivver with his telescope and began exhibiting the wonders of the sky to the multitudes.

Soon came questions that were hard to answer with mere words and he cast about for a means of explaining so that even the average man could understand the movements of the stellar firmament. He finally invented two exhibits which show in actual movement the manner in which the moon and earth revolve around the sun and the positions of the various planets and principal stars in each of the different phases. He mounted the exhibit on the side of his truck and then became a wandering professor of astronomy.

Inside the truck, he has arranged a bunk and shelves to hold his books on this science. His little truck contains all of the essential comforts of a home.

He makes no charge for the exhibit but lectures nightly on the stars to usually capacity audiences gathered about his car. He makes his living by charging for peeps through a large telescope at the actual heavenly bodies that he has talked about.

Another source of income is the sale of his exhibits to colleges and schools and he has a number of letters from college faculties telling of their delight with the ease of teaching when they use his mechanisms.

One of his pet ambitions has been to peep through the giant telescope at the Naval Observatory in Washington and that is one of the primary reasons for his stopping here, although he expects to view other interesting sights in Washington.

In the five years of his wanderings he has traveled over much of the United States and has exhibited to about 40,000 persons a year. He figures that he has traveled between 20,000 and 30,000 miles in slow stages.

He is 60 years young, he says, and expects to add many more years of interesting study of the science of astronomy to his span. He has succeeded in combining the pleasure of a hobby with his everyday business and at the same time pays homage to the spirit of adventure which still rankles in his breast.

WHOLE TOWN TURNS OUT TO FIGHT FIRES

BUCKET BRIGADE IN VOGUE

Dearborn, Mo., July 21.—Perhaps critics of the small town never have seen a bucket brigade in action. As an example of cooperation without resolutions, by-laws or executive committee, the results are not uninteresting.

Dearborn owns no fire-fighting equipment, but every man and woman in town is a member of the fire department.

The bucket brigade is efficient. Most of the year it is difficult to get aid from St. Joseph or Leavenworth on account of bad road conditions, but there have been few disastrous fires here.

To begin operation, a report is sent to the telephone switchboard operator, who must be aroused from sleep if the fire occurs after midnight. Usually the fire is within a block or two from the telephone office, so it does not take long to get "Central."

Phone Girl Awakens Citizens.

She connects all the city telephones and rings until she has informed even the sleepiest citizen.

There is no scream of sirens, nor rush of powerful trucks.

The fire is every one's fire, although it may be in an old vacant building all had been wishing to have torn down.

There is the danger of spreading to be considered.

As soon as Central's first round of warning is completed, lights flash on in homes all over the town. Every man jumps into his clothes and rushes toward the fire with shoes untied, overalls held up by one suspender, shirt unbuttoned, hair untidy and head usually hatless. On his way out he seizes a bucket, and if he is not sure he can get water from a well nearer the fire he pumps a bucket full from his own, and starts on the run.

They all know that the idea is to get water, and a lot of it, at the base of the flames. A few men take it on themselves to pump the water, others carry buckets, others station themselves on ladders to hand up the buckets, and others stand on the roof or some other advantageous place and dash the water on. If the fire has sufficient start the men divide into several groups, working from different wells.

All Kinds Form Bucket Brigade.

Ministers, doctors, teachers, merchants, farmers, bankers, every man within a radius of a mile stand side by side to fight the fire. One of them will need aid the next time.

It isn't long after the men appear on the scene until their wives and children gather to watch the excitement. In their hurry they are only a little more carefully dressed than the men. In the group there are mothers who hurried their sleepy little youngsters out of bed.

Fires make such a lasting impression on the minds of the people of Dearborn that, as in Chicago and London, time is reckoned with references to them. For instance:

"Mary Brown's husband ran off the night of the fire in the restaurant and hasn't come back yet. It won't be long now until she can get her divorce."

"The interurban line has been here seventeen years. The first car ran the day the old mill burned down."

Slaying of Prisoners Protested by Bolivia

La Paz, Bolivia, July 21 (A.P.).—A note protesting against the assassination last December of two Bolivian prisoners by Paraguayan soldiers has been dispatched to Brig. Gen. McCoy, chairman of the Paraguayan-Bolivian conciliation commission, in Washington for transmission to the Paraguayan government.

The communication declares the men were killed in the vicinity of Fort Ingallon and charges one of the prisoners, Private Ignacio Vargas, was shot dead by a mounted Paraguayan corporal named Quevia Jaba because Vargas had been resting. The note says the slaying was witnessed by a second lieutenant of the Paraguayan army in charge of the prisoners. The Bolivian press denounces the alleged killings and demands the American Government exact from Paraguay full responsibility and punishment of the slayers.

Watson and Police Inspector Albert J. Headley.

The flames and smoke curling high into the air attracted the large crowd and the fire vehicles experienced considerable difficulty in weaving a path to the scene. In several instances the lack of nearby fire hydrants forced an extension of water lines seven to eight blocks away.

Principal loss was sustained in the two-story brick office structure and in a 150-foot adjoining low brick factory shed, which housed the stone-cutting machinery. The roof of the building and most of the wooden work in the interior of this structure was destroyed, and other minor damage was caused by water. In the remainder of the property, the unenclosed portion in the north end, adjoining the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad, slight damage resulted, although the material there consisted principally of finished stone products.

Although stubborn at times, the blaze was declared well under control soon after the second alarm was sounded and the firemen were successful in preventing the spread to a tank below the office building containing more than 500 gallons of gasoline.

Despite the fact that many of the fallen wires were charged with electricity which had not been cut off, only one minor shock victim was reported. He was Fireman L. B. Stuart, of Engine Company No. 17, who inadvertently stepped back on a wire and toppled to the ground in momentary pain. After a brief rest, he resumed his duties.

THE NEW WEEK'S BILLS

PALACE

"THUNDER." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer silent picture, starring Lon Chaney, with Phyllis Haver and James Murray. Directed by William Nigh. Reviewed Sunday afternoon, by C. Ransom.

Without denying that the movies have dealt handsomely with railroads before now, it may fairly be said that no preceding film has conveyed so deftly and adequately the deep fascination that attaches to all the paraphernalia of train service. A director with a most modern and zestful eye for camera slants and a kind feeling for machinery has made much of his opportunity. The Chicago & Northwestern road in winter furnishes a blue background for the greater part of the story, which turns for a dramatic climax to the flooded regions of the lower Mississippi.

Lon Chaney in the character of John Anderson, a crabbed old locomotive engineer, dominates the tale, which, indeed, hangs wholly upon his passion for service. Yet it is no mere study of personality, but a simple and genuine drama of family conflict, with some harmlessly effective melodramatic and spectacular elements. Old Andy has two sons, both railroaders. He lives with one who has a charming wife and little boy, and the other one is his fireman on locomotive 2629. The younger son takes up with a show girl who steals a ride on the engine, and he is dissatisfied and rebellious at his father's devotion to railroading. His brother's wife shares this feeling, and when the married son's life is sacrificed to the peril of his job the family resentment rises to the point of blaming and deserting the old driver. Relegated to the shops by failing eyesight, the old man comes at last, by a rather forced chain of circumstances, to his heroic opportunity in the flooded South, where he drives his beloved 2629 over flooded tracks with supplies for the marooned populace.

Chaney has never offered a finer piece of acting, and if there has been any doubt of his rightful place in the top rank of players this work should remove it. Phyllis Haver as the young man's actress sweetheart also confirms her high repute as an understanding artiste. Her part is merely colorful and sympathetic, leading nowhere in particular in the story, but she is unfailingly expressive. James Murray is good as the young fireman, and all the lesser parts are very well done.

On the stage, doughboy uniforms and a dugout for background set the keynote for "Over the Top," in which Johnny Burke, well-known soldier comic of the war films, is the central figure. In the capacity of corporal he drills a squad of singing privates through some absurd maneuvers and has some classy patter. A trio of doughboys do some tricky precision dances, and Herbert Rawlinson appears in ceremonial puttees.

There are brief news pictures, and it should not be forgotten that the Palace Orchestra and organ have a chance for admirable service in accompanying the strangely noiseless feature.

METROPOLITAN

"ON WITH THE SHOW." A Warner Bros. Vitaphone Technicolor adaptation of a story by Humphrey Pearson, featuring Sam Hardy, Betty Compson, Sally O'Neil and others. Directed by Alan Crosland. Reviewed Saturday night (third week) by W. A. Whitney.

To the many encomiums already written regarding "On With the Show" but little can be added at the opening of this, its third week, a fact which alone should suffice as testimony of its excellence.

An extravaganza that outglorifies even Dr. Ziegfeld, the great glorifier, and a back-stage drama of the trials and tribulations of revue production are here admirably blended to form one of the finest sound pictures that has yet been presented. Either portion of the film drama could have been elaborated into a feature-length production. However, Alan Crosland—to whom most of the credit for a magnificent piece of work must go, for, with less sympathetic direction, the picture would have been a flop of the first water—has developed a fast-moving story, gorgeously mounted, excellently acted, and actually believable, notwithstanding omission of a few details which might have made the roles of certain characters clearer to the audience.

The use of color in the motion picture has been the greatest desideratum for years and "On With the Show," entirely done in Technicolor, will take its place among the outstanding pictures of all time for having presented life as it is, with its action, sound and color.

The entire cast is admirably selected for the many parts. Sam Hardy, as the producer; Betty Compson, as the leading lady of "The Phantom Lover;" Joe E. Brown and Louise Fazenda, the principal comedians; Arthur Lake, the lead in the "Lover," and William Bakewell and Sally O'Neil, furnishing the juvenile love interest, might be mentioned as the principals who carry most of the speaking parts. Ethel Waters, Lee Moran, Wheeler Oakman, Harry Gribbon, Thomas Jefferson, the Fairbanks Twins, the Harmony Emperor's Quartet, and a chorus of 100 comprise the rest of the cast. The entire production is excellently recorded.

Pathe Sound News, a Vitaphone presentation of the infantile blues singer, Baby Rose Marie, and a trailer of Richard Barthelmess' "Drag" complete the bill.

FOX

"PLEASURE CRAZED." Fox all-talking picture, based upon Monckton Hoffe's stage play, "The Scent of Sweet Almonds." Dorothy Burgess, Kenneth MacKenna and Marguerite Churchill featured under Donald Gallaher's direction. Reviewed Saturday night by Mary Porter Russell.

Few actresses find the lucky breaks that have come the way of Dorothy Burgess. When she deserted the footlights for her first cinema venture as Tonia in "In Old Arizona," she identified her name and her vibrant personality with one of the outstanding pictures of the year. Now it develops that her second film, although lacking the quaintness and color of the first, is likewise an exceptional production, which can not fail to receive acclaim. Being Dorothy, she would have made herself felt in any event, but even to the highly talented, coincidences like this have a way of proving helpful.

She has become, if you will accept our word, not only a super-modern woman of fashion, but a blonde. Every outward characteristic is opposed to those of the primitive, scheming, cruel little creature whom she brought to life in her earlier portrayal, yet essentially she is the same. The frivolous, faithless Alma, who plays with her husband's love like a despised but useful toy, lays bare a heart and soul that make her Tonia's twin.

The story is enacted briskly and with consistently maintained suspense before a background of wealth and considerable beauty. A sweet young girl crook—the kind about whom you've heard before—is planted as housekeeper in the home of a youthful author and his wife who have come to Western climes to lose one of madame's too ardent admirers. The indiscretions of Alma, the persecution of Nora, by the accomplices who won't let her quit the job, and the awakening of a real love between the girl and disillusioned husband, work their way up to a climax that is preceded by a polo game and an automobile wreck, not to mention an attempted murder.

The dialogue, accredited to Clark Kummer, is conspicuously superior to that of the majority of talking pictures that have come our way, and the portrayal of the husband's role by Kenneth MacKenna shines as brightly as the performance of Miss Burgess—if less scintillatingly. Marguerite Churchill, as Nora, falls considerably below their level, with her rather stilted and belligerent reading of lines, though her low-pitched voice comes through the microphone more pleasingly than Miss Burgess' higher tones.

On the stage, John Irving Fisher and the Fox Jazzmanians play hosts to the usual assortment of variegated talent. Born and Lawrence, the long-and-short-of-it comedians, forced their way first into the hearts of their countrymen Saturday night with some really funny songs and postures. Chick Kennedy's "tough" number was a little too familiar to arouse enthusiasm, but she followed it with a cutely rendered "You're Just a Good Boy" song, directed, for reasons unknown, toward the master of ceremonies. He was so touched that he drank a bottle of what might or might not have been what it looked like right up before everybody, and then went into a piano accompaniment for a gymnastic vocal solo by Jack Rose. The Morosco Brothers contributed a drunken dance at this fitting point. Howard O'Shea also stepped nimbly from time to time, and the Foxettes made frequent and colorful entries.

The Fox Movietone News makes itself seen and heard and there is another of the Post-Fox screen test reels that is nothing short of tremendous.

EARLE

"THE LEATHERNECK." A Pathe adaptation of a story by Elliott Clawson, starring William Boyd, supported by Alan Hale and Robert Armstrong. Directed by Howard Higgins. Reviewed Saturday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

The all-for-one-and-one-for-all theme of "The Three Musketeers" again comes to the fore in William Boyd's latest vehicle, having for its background the steadfast friendship of three Marines whose association began in Russia during the World War.

The story opens rather abruptly with the courtmartial of William "Tex" Calhoun on charges of desertion and the murder of Joseph Hanlon. The story is told through testimonial flash-backs from the time of the formation of the alliance of the two soldiers and an former German prisoner up to the time that verdicts of guilty on the two charges are returned. The sentence, however, is not read, due to Calhoun's wife, abducted during a revolution, making her appearance and verifying the heretofore uncorroborated story.

While the acknowledged star, William Boyd, does a creditable piece of work as Calhoun, Alan Hale steals the picture with his superb characterization of Otto Schmidt, who, through the application of the fiendish water torture, goes insane. Robert Armstrong offers an acceptable impersonation of Joseph Hanlon, the third friend. Mitchell Lewis portrays with realism the hard-boiled Capt. Brand, U. S. M. C., who, in spite of a stony exterior, has the welfare of his men at heart. Fred Kohler is convincing as the diabolical Heckla, who usurps the Petrovitch potash mines in Manchuria. Tanya Petrovitch, later Calhoun's wife, is sympathetically played by the wistful Diane Ellis.

Excluding the courtmartial scenes, in which there is djalogue, the picture is synchronized only with a musical score which is well done except for the ill-advised interpolation of a vocal theme song at moments of the most passionate love-making. Occassionally, the score, superimposed on the talking, detracts from a perfect understanding of the dialogue, which, is, for the most part, well recorded and well reproduced.

Co-featured with "The Leatherneck" is Charles Hampden, late of the National Theater Players, who conducts the orchestra and sings, in a rich tenor voice, Edward Elgar's stirring "Land of Gore and Glory" and the tuneful "One Alone" from Hammerstein's operetta, "The Desert Song." Sandwiched between are a number of stories and reminiscences done in his inimitable style.

Assisted by the Philadelphia Grand Opera Company and Vitaphone, Hope Hampton sings the fourth act of Massenet's immortal opera, "Manon." Ray and Dot Dean have a Vitaphone skit called "He's a Devil," in which Ray does some fast eccentric stepping and there is the Earle Topical Review.

Under the baton of Daniel Breeskin, the Earle Orchestra plays von Suppe's delightful "Morning, Noon and Night in Vienna" to complete a varied and entertaining program.

COLUMBIA

"EVANGELINE." United Artists sound production, with synchronized score and songs (no dialogue), starring Dolores Del Rio. Reviewed Sunday night (second week) by J. F. Brady.

The charm and dramatic finesse of Dolores Del Rio, apparently increased tenfold in public estimation by her personal appearances last week, together with the undeniable beauty of Longfellow's classic poem, are an irresistible combination that make "Evangeline" an unusual picture. Miss Del Rio sings "Chansonette" none too often in her clear soprano, and the remarkable beauty of the well chosen outdoor settings can not but be remarked.

The story, following the poem closely, is necessarily one of pathos. It is saved from unrelieved tragedy by the foresight of its producers in devoting the earlier part of the film to the happy atmosphere of Arcadia, and the delineation of the French-Canadian life and character. The simplicity of these people and their staunch refusal to fight against their own blood, lay a foundation that makes the story of the undying love of Gabriel and Evangeline easily believable. The long search of the separated lovers with one high mark of drama in the shooting of the rapids becomes but the weakened sequence of an otherwise strong picture.

Characterization is the greatest excellence of "Evangeline." Dolores Del Rio is the central figure of practically every scene. As the gay young sweetheart, the anguished searcher, and the resigned old woman she is perfectly "in character." "Evangeline" provides the medium of Miss Del Rio's best screen work. Roland Drew and Donald Reed as lovers of Evangeline are equally ardent, but the young actor who plays the village fiddler and James Marcus, as Basil, the rugged blacksmith, score higher, and Alec B. Francis, as Father Felician, higher still.

Man "Parks" Gun; Outing Is Ruined

Police Take Him in Charge After He Checks Weapon With Hat Boy.

James Powell, colored, 22 years old, of Arlington, Va., would have been a passenger on the St. Madison Hall as it steamed from the dock at the foot of the Seventh street wharf last night for River View, Md., commonly referred to as "Razor Beach," but for two reasons, namely:

He checked his .32-caliber target pistol with the check boy as soon as he boarded the boat in the first place, and, secondly, police of the Harbor Precinct heard about it.

Powell, with three friends, boarded the E. Madison Hall shortly before 7 o'clock last night intent on a big evening at Razor Beach. To make sure no unpleasantry would mar the boat ride down the river, Powell, according to police, "parked his gun," and then took a seat in a quiet sector of the vessel. Sergt. S. H. L. Russell and Private J. E. Bennett, of the Harbor Precinct, thought Powell would be better off in town, so they took him into custody and turned him over to police of the Fourth Precinct, who charged him with carrying concealed weapons. When searched at the station house, police found nearly a dozen .32-caliber shells on Powell's person.

BREMEN MAY BREAK OCEAN MARK TODAY

chances of making a new record again today may be spoiled by the adverse effect of the Gulf Stream, but only accident or fog can prevent the ship from making a new transatlantic crossing record.

It is still believed that the ship will reach Ambrose Lightship at 4:30 p. m. tomorrow, making a new record for the crossing of 4 days 19½ hours.

There has been much gayety on board in anticipation of the ship taking the record away from the Mauretania, and one impromptu celebration after another has been held in advance. There was a storm last night, but it was not of sufficient duration to raise a heavy sea.

The extreme comfort of the ship while traveling at the high speed we are making has been an agreeable surprise to every one. There has been practically no vibration. Capt. Ziegenbein says that he hasn't pushed the engines in the speed effort, but that they have been running at the normal maximum.

A fifty-year-old stowaway with a luxuriant growth of whiskers was discovered today.

St. Vincent Conferences Hold Quarterly Session

Twenty conferences were represented yesterday at the quarterly meeting of the St. Vincent de Paul Society at Knights of Columbus Hall. Reports were heard from all the conferences, including the special work which has charge of institutional work.

W. J. Philp, Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, made the principal address and praised the work of the society. Other speakers included Cornelius Ford, Allen Pope, John H. McCarron, W. W. de Lacey, W. H. Normoyle and Thomas Galliher. George J. Cleary, president of the Particular Society, of Washington, presided. Prior to the meeting, the delegates heard a discourse on the life of St. Vincent de Paul from Dr. Lawrence J. Shehan, assistant director of Catholic Charities, at 8 o'clock mass in St. Patrick's Church.

Haemoglobin's Police Dog Training Justified at Last

Feline Pet, in Whom Patrolman Owner Never Lost His Faith, Finally Comes Through in Big Way Leading to Capture of Fugitive.

For months, Policeman J. O. Patton, of the Thirteenth precinct, has been training his pet cat, Haemoglobin, to be a police dog, but for some reason, probably lack of genuine opportunity, Haemy didn't seem to respond to higher education. But he vindicated himself yesterday.

Patton was eating breakfast at his home at 1523 Trinidad avenue northeast, when Haemy suddenly started to "bark and growl" in true police-dog fashion, at the same time pointing his tail toward the window through which Patton glimpsed a fleeing figure, barefoot, dashing wildly down an alley.

Without even stopping to thank the cat for the tip, Patton ran out of his house, his bedroom slippers flying hither and yon, and gave chase barefoot after the barefoot fugitive, whom he cornered at last and arrested in an alley four blocks away, in the rear of 1400 Childrey street.

As he was leading his captive out of the alley, still not knowing why he had arrested him, other than that the man had been running under circumstances that seemed unjustified, Policeman B. H. Landrum, of the Ninth Precinct, arrived on the scene and explained what it was all about.

It seems that one Nannie Simms, colored, of 1524 Lebis street northeast, had complained to the police that a Robert Green, also colored and of the same address, was breaking up her furniture and making himself otherwise obnoxious. As Landrum entered the front door in answer to the complaint, Green executed a graceful swan dive out of a second-story window, without waiting to don any garments except his trousers, and sprinted up the alley where he had attracted the unfavorable and suspicious attention of Haemoglobin.

Green was taken to the Ninth Precinct and lodged

THREE KILLED, 20 SHOT DOWN IN PRISON RIOT

WHITTEMORE AIDS SUSPECTED LEADERS

Dannemora, N. Y., July 22 (N.Y.W.N. S.).—For four riotous hours the toughest collection of criminals ever banded together in the State, led by more than 100 life-termers, held sway in Clinton prison here today, pillaging, wrecking and burning buildings in the hope that the smoke screen might enable them to break through the thin line of guards they had chased to the top of the surrounding walls.

The outbreak failed, but not until three convicts had been killed, more than twenty others shot, two guards beaten, fire had destroyed two workshop buildings, and the prison lighting system was in ruins.

Whittemore Gangsters Suspected.

Suspicion was attached to the Kraemer brothers, Dick and Leon, two inmates who were members of the Richard Reese Whittemore gang. They were credited with attempting to engineer two wholesale deliveries from the Dannemora institution in 1927 On these occasions prison authorities intercepted apparently harmless shipments to the prison only to find that the boxes contained pistols, ammunition and whisky, the three essentials for a bloody break for freedom.

The Kraemer brothers, who had been involved in a big diamond robbery with the Whittemore gang, were sentenced in 1924. Whittemore himself was hanged in Baltimore and the rest of the gang were convicted, some going to Dannemora and some to Sing Sing for long terms.

Prisoners were killed and wounded at the height of the turmoil, when, by forming human pyramids, they tried to meet the machine gun, rifle and shotgun fire of the guards and scale the 20-foot stone walls, armed with knives, pipes, hammers, chisels and similar weapons obtained from the prison shops.

Met By Hail of Lead.

As fast as the ringleaders climbed through the billowing smoke and appeared at the top of the walls, they were met by a hail of bullets that sent them tumbling down into the prison yard where nearly the 1,568 inmates were milling about yelling, fighting among themselves and hurling whatever missiles were handy at their keepers.

Shortly after noon, when they had been repulsed again and again, the convicts began a sullen retreat from the prison yard into the main building, leaving about two dozen of their number scattered about the debris-strewn battlefield. The barred doors of the building were locked, the outer gates were opened, firemen gathered from three nearby towns rushed in, the dead were identified, the wounded treated and the outbreak simmered down to the investigation stage.

None Make Escape.

A check-up showed that not a single prisoner had escaped and the preliminary investigation conducted by Warden Harry M. Kaiser indicated that the flare-up was deliberately plotted by a group of "incorrigible" lifers sent to Dannemora because they were too tough for Sing Sing and the prison at Auburn.

Warden Kaiser said trouble had been in the air for weeks, fomented by many of the 118 men serving the rest of their natural lives for murder in the first degree or their fourth felony and some of the 400 or more others who have twenty-year stretches before them. The men have refused to work and have complained about the food, their living quarters and the discipline of the prison which is selected as quarters for the most dangerous convicts because its isolation renders escape extremely difficult.

Trio Is Identified

The three dead convicts have been ringleaders, he said, identifying them as follows:

Harold F. Brunner, 33, of Tioga, Pa., sentenced from Lewis County for life as a fourth offender on a larceny charge.

Clyde Shakelford, 30, of Albany, sentenced from Albany County for from twenty years to life, charged with murder, second degree.

The pride of Germany, the new North German-Lloyd liner Bremen, sailed July 16 and made a new mark for the transatlantic crossing. The old record was set by the Mauretania of the Cunard line and was 5 days and 3 hours for the westward crossing. The eastward crossing mark is held by the same ship and is 5 days 1 hour and 45 minutes. The new westward crossing record of the Bremen is 4 days 17 hours and 42 minutes.

LYNCHING IS FEARED; GUARD CALLED OUT

TRIAL TO START TODAY

Montgomery, Ala., July 22 (A.P.).—Alabama National Guard units were mobilized for the first time in upward of a decade today to prevent execution of threats of mob violence to a negro, charged with commission of a major crime.

Under orders from Gov. Bibb Graves to protect Lester Bouyer "at any hazard," two Birmingham guard units were to entrain there tonight for Montgomery, where early tomorrow they were to receive custody of the prisoner from Kilby prison authorities.

They will take Bouyer to Eufaula, in Barbour County, 90 odd miles southeast of here, and less than a dozen miles from Ozyton, where indictments charging him with the murder of Jack Hines, Eufaula mechanic, and a statutory offense against Miss Beatrice Clark, Hines' companion, near Eufaula on the night of July 10, were returned today by a special grand jury. His trial is scheduled to open at a special term of court at 8:30 a. m tomorrow. The train is not expected to reach Eufaula until shortly before the scheduled opening of the trial.

The guardsmen will be accompanied by a squad of State law enforcement officers. They will remain with the negro from the time they receive him at Kilby until completion of the trial.

Reports from Barbour County authorities said the guardsmen probably will be called on to escort the negro back to Kilby in the event of conviction or out of the community if acquitted.

The detachments were called out by Governor Graves at the request of Barbour authorties who stated county and municipal forces would be unable to cope with the threatened situation. In responding with the order, the State's chief executive declared "there will not be a lynching in Alabama if I can prevent it."

Reports from Barbour County late today said everything was quiet al-

Mauretania's Mark Cut Down by Nearly Nine Hours.

German Liner Is Docked 4 Days and 17 Hours After Leaving.

New York, July 22 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—At 2:02 o'clock this afternoon the rakish giant, the North German Lloyd liner, Bremen, slid over the finishing mark at Ambrose Channel light vessel, ending the fastest voyage a merchant ship has ever made across the Atlantic—or any other sea or ocean.

She seized the speed crown of the seas by crossing from Cherbourg in 4 days 17 hours and 42 minutes. By 8 hours and 52 minutes she robbed the Cunard liner Mauretania of the Atlantic's blue pennant. The Mauretania, speed champion for 22 years, made her best time in September, 1927, when she crossed from Cherbourg to New York in 5 days 2 hours and 34 minutes.

Capt. Leopold Ziegenbein was smiling but very tired as he made the short run from Quarantine this evening and moored the new queen to her berth at Fifty-eighth street, Brooklyn.

"Splendid," he said of the trip "Splendid, everything was splendid—the ship, the engines and the weather."

His ship for the crossing averaged 27.83 knots, easily ahead of the Mauretania's previous westbound record of 25.6 knots. On his final spurt for the tape he drove his ship down the coast for a day's average of 29.6 knots, a speed of more than 34 land miles an hour—5 miles an hour less than the Twentieth Century Limited averages for her run from Albany to New York.

The new flier presents the most modern note in design. She is 938 feet long, with lines in her hull and superstructure that sweep into long, swift effects.

Her two funnels mark her as the most distinguished ship to enter the port. They sit squat and low on the hurricane deck, presenting the idea of swiftness and power. As a new idea, they are elliptically shaped.

The whole ship flows into swiftness. Her lines blend into a sharp cruiser stern, starting from a stem, raked somewhat like a clipper-bow, as found in the fastest cruisers and men of war.

CHARGES DENIED BY HIM

London, July 22 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Richard Joshua Reynolds, 23-year-old American citizen living in London, said to be a son of the late R. J. Reynolds, tobacco magnate, and one of five heirs to a $50,000,000 fortune, went on trial at Old Bailey here today charged with manslaughter. He is accused of having been the driver of an automobile which May 14, last, struck a motorcycle being ridden by Arthur Reginald Graham along the Bath road near Slough, Buckinghamshire. Graham died three days later in Windsor Hospital of injuries received in the crash.

The prosecution alleged today that young Reynolds was drunk at the time of the collision. According to the testimony, Reynolds hired a green saloon car on the morning of May 14 and that night such a car was seen on the Bath road just before the crash that resulted in Graham's death. It was testified that the car which struck Graham's motorcycle carried it 42 feet after the collision, and that after the smash the automobile continued on its journey. Later, a Mr. Walker saw a car being driven zig-zag along a road in Chiswick, a London suburb. He took a policeman into his car and followed the other machine at a distance of about 2 miles until it stopped. Reynolds, the prosecution charges, was the driver of this car and was so drunk that when he tried to get out of it he fell down.

Reynolds denied being drunk at the time, but a police doctor at a police station to which he was taken said that he was drunk and unfit to drive. The prosecution charges that it was Reynolds' drunkenness which was the cause of Graham's death.

Gov. Gardner Called In Mill Strike Trial

Gastonia, N. C., July 22 (A.P.).—Gov. Gardner was subpenaed late today as a witness in the trial of 23 Loray mill strikers and strike sympathizers held in connection with the slaying of O. F. Aderholt, Gastonia chief of police, at the strikers' encampment on June 7. The trial is set for next Monday.

Intends to Close All Saloons in Italy, Says Premier.

New York, July 22 (A.P.).—Benito Mussolini, in an interview published in the August issue of the World's Work, is quoted as saying that, principally for economic reasons, he intends to cut down wine consumption by Italians.

"I have closed 27,000 saloons in five years," Il Duce is quoted as saying. "Give me time and I will close them all."

The interview with the dictator makes it clear that his program is designed to assist in making Italy self-sustaining. Italy, he is quoted as declaring, devotes 8,500,000 acres of land to vineyards, or more than half of the total vineyard acreage of all Europe, consuming the entire production within its borders and importing more, while it is unable to raise enough wheat to meet its own needs.

White House Guest Room Made Ready for Coolidge

Former President Arrives Tomorrow With Wife for Antiwar Pact Ceremony; Will Dine With Hoovers and May Spend Night; Press Conference.

Calvin Coolidge, for more than five years master of the White House, will return to the Executive Mansion tomorrow with an invitation to dine, talk and be at home in the guest room.

The former President and Mrs. Coolidge will dine with the Hoovers. Mr. Coolidge, who created his own mythical "White House spokesman," will talk as a private citizen in a White House press conference that has been arranged for him. The Coolidges have not indicated whether they will accept the President's invitation to remain overnight at the White House.

The Old Home Week atmosphere for the home-coming will be heightened by the presence of Everett Sanders and Edward T. Clark, the two secretaries who served with Mr. Coolidge in the White House. They are arranging details for everything except Mr. Coolidge's part in the ceremonies attending exchange of ratification of the Kellogg antiwar agreement in the famous East Room of the White House.

The East Room is being entirely renovated and redecorated for the ceremony, furniture being moved and rearranged to make room for a large number of invited guests.

Official Washington expects the former President to remain in Washington overnight as the only through train that could take the Coolidges back to Northampton, Mass., after the ceremonies leaves Washington early in the morning.

No other official engagements have been made for the Coolidges, who are expected to go direct to the White House from the train and return to their train in the same direct manner.

President Hoover yesterday completed the draft of the brief speech he will make on the occasion in which the Kellogg-Briand pact will become effective. The speech will be delivered immediately preceding reading of the proclamation of the treaty.

Frank B. Kellogg, former Secretary of State, whose name the treaty bears, and who arrived in Washington Sunday was invited Sunday to be a White House guest for the remainder of his brief stay in Washington.

HOOVER PLANS TO PUSH STATE DRY HELP IDEA

Governors to Be Prodded Until They Take Over Enforcement.

EXECUTIVE'S PARLEY IN CAPITAL IS HINTED

Law Commission Voices No Disagreement With Leader's Letter.

OPPOSITION OF DRYS EXPECTED TO GROW

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

The Hoover administration plans to keep after the State governors until they are shamed into taking over the business of local prohibition enforcement. The now famous Wickersham letter was intended as a start in this direction, President Hoover in speeches having already paved the way.

It is not unlikely—in fact, highly probable—that after one or two more such moves as the Wickersham letter that the President will call a governors' conference here. At any rate, it is known to be the determination not to let the governors side-step the question as they did at New London.

It was definitely made known yesterday that Mr. Wickersham intends to let his letter stew awhile before adding to or detracting from it. The law enforcement commission met for the first time since the letter was made public, eight of the eleven members being in attendance. There had been previous indications that it was not the commission's letter, simply Mr. Wickersham's own. But there was no evidence yesterday that any member resented it or was inclined to disagree with the sentiments it contained.

Plans Are Discussed.

The meeting, it was said, was given over to organization, or rather the best way to approach its work. Incidentally, it is about time for the commission to reach a conclusion on this.

But it is inconceivable that the chairman's letter was not discussed. The members were together all day, from shortly after 9 o'clock in the morning until after 5 in the afternoon.

Of more importance than its routine work, however, is the definite impression which the circumstances of Mr. Wickersham's letter gave that he has virtually carte blanche authority to proceed on prohibition as he sees fit. And this being so, the governors are in for some hard days.

To Get Responsibility.

It has been a long time since prohibition, the enforcement of it, has been a problem to them, save in the comparatively few States where it is always agitated. Insofar as the great number are concerned they have not even had to say whether they were wet or dry, it has just been assumed that they were the latter. They have long since stepped from under the burden or the responsibility for enforcement, though. The administration is determined, especially with the favorable response that it has received from the organized drys, to give the responsibility back to them.

It may be that when the organized drys learn the full significance of the program that they will lose some of their enthusiasm for it. Because the program contemplates a general decentralization of enforcement, and it would necessarily follow that the prohibition lobby be decentralized.

Legislatures Would Be Target.

Instead of camping on the footsteps of the White House and Capitol as is now the case it would have to direct its efforts at the several State legislatures. It would mean that instead of one Dr. Clarence True Wilson, Dr. F. Scott McBride and Deets Pickett here there would have to be little Wilsons, McBrides and Deets Picketts at every State capitol, and similarly little Henry H. Currans of the Association Against the Eighteenth Amendment.

The cost of prohibition lobbying would, of course, go up, but there would be a broader lobbying field and one affording opportunity to more people.

The decentralization of the lobby, however, is foremost in the ultimate aim of the entire plan. The President does not think that the administration should be held responsible for the lack of enforcement but that the several States should be looked to for it. The administration is prepared to take the responsibility of what it considers to be really the Federal Government's job, the prevention of smuggling, big manufactures and interstate traffic.

PROFFER OF FRENCH AID IS TURNED DOWN

Both Countries Renew Pledge to Use Force Only in Defense.

NANKING PREPARING NEW MOSCOW NOTE

Appeal to League Reported Planned If Kellogg Pact Proves Futile.

(Associated Press.)

The first attempt to settle peaceably the dispute between Russia and China has failed, although renewed assurances were given yesterday that neither country would resort to war unless overt acts were committed against it.

The government of the Soviet Union disclosed that France had offered its good services to mediate in the conflict growing out of dismissal by China of the Russian administration of the Chinese Eastern Railway in Manchuria. At the same time Russia announced it could not accept the offer because China had refused to restore the status quo that Russia demanded as a preliminary to negotiations.

Neutral observers in Peiping, on information from many sources, reached the conclusion there had been no clashes between Chinese and Russian troops on the frontier of Manchuria. Most of the rumors had come from Harbin, where they were accepted to the extent that Russian Consul General Meinikoff was detained by the Chinese until the reports were investigated. He has now been released.

Renew Pledge to Pact.

The State Department in Washington received assurances from both the Chinese and Russian governments that they would abide by the Kellogg antiwar treaty and would countenance war only in self-defense. Simultaneously, the Japanese government advised that it was cooperating fully with Secretary Stimson, completing the unity in the crisis of the signatory powers of the Pan-Pacific treaty.

The Nationalist government of China was said to be prepared to seek intervention by the League of Nations if the Kellogg pact failed to hold the war dogs in leash.

Moscow, July 22 (A.P.).—The Soviet government announced tonight it had declined an offer by France to mediate in the Manchurian conflict.

This action was said to be due to refusal of the Chinese authorities to restore the status quo on the Chinese Eastern Railway in Manchuria as demanded in the Soviet note of July 13.

Soviet Makes Three Demands.

The Soviet note of July 13, to answer which China was given three days, demanded three things. One was that a conference be called immediately to regulate all phases of the dispute, another that the Chinese authorities immediately cancel all arbitrary orders regarding the railway and, lastly, that all Soviet citizens arrested should be released immediately and Soviet citizens and institutions protected henceforth.

The Chinese answered, just within the three days, with two demands calling for the release of all Chinese imprisoned in Russia and adequate protection for Chinese nationals.

Following delivery of this note, which was held to be unsatisfactory in Moscow, Russia broke off diplomatic relations with China and the latter took similar action on the following day.

Peiping, July 22 (A.P.).—While new moves were made today to maintain

WEDDING BELLS FOR FILM STARS

Wedding bells will soon be ringing for Sue Carol, left, motion picture actress, and Nick Stuart, also of the films, who yesterday admitted their engagement, long rumored in Hollywood, according to Associated Press dispatches. Miss Carol said it would be several months, however, before the nuptial ceremony takes place.

Manchuria Railway Dominates Building Up of Huge Empire

China and Russia Have Long Struggled to Control Carrier, Likened to Political State and Now Bone of Contention; Foreseen as Incentive to War.

This is the third and concluding special article on Manchuria based on United States Government reports.

By REGINALD P. MITCHELL.

Woven into the very warp and woof of Manchuria's life fabric is the Chinese Eastern Railway, Manchuria's main street, the crux of the belligerant situation in the Far East between China and Soviet Russia.

Its great importance can scarcely be visualized, for the few persons among the approximately 27,000,000 in the three Eastern provinces, as the region popularly is known, fail to come into contact daily either directly or indirectly with this great system and its widespread ramifications.

Its value in colonizing this vast northern territory and in making its own resources, and in part the buried wealth of an awakening continent beyond, available to the outside world is difficult to measure For the reason that it manifestly has played so conspicuous a part in this unfolding drama of an almost truly the coveted Alladin's lamp of virgin land, the Chinese Eastern is Manchuria and its hinterland.

Connecting Vladivostok and the Pacific Ocean ports with the transsiberian railroad, the road forms a giant ribbon of steel running far westward to the distant ports of the Baltic and the North Seas. A pigmy line in comparison with some of America's great rail transportation organizations, the Chinese Eastern's actual mileage of 1,078, with spurs to timber concessions aggregating 286 miles additional, nevertheless commands a towering influence probably not equaled by any other railroad in the world.

Ever since its construction in an agreement in 1896 between China and Russia, the enterprise has been the dominant civic factor in the region. It has created cities and towns, over which it administered; it has maintained schools hospitals and until recently, churches. It has pioneered in the Harbin area and in North Manchuria in many branches of industry, with its sawmills, its plant for the dry distillation of wood, its parquet or wooden mosaic factory and its plant for the hydraulic press packing of wool and skins.

Rumblings of War Leave Chinese of Capital Cold

Depending Upon San Francisco Newspaper, Week Old When It Gets Here, for News, and Happy as Is, They Are Apathetic.

Chiang Kai-shek, the Chinese leader in the threatened war between China and Russia, need not expect any help from Washington's Chinatown in the event of hostilities.

A visit to the Chinese colony here yesterday made that clear.

Sun Sing, proprietor of a laundry at 317 Pennsylvania avenue, laid down his iron, and, emerging from a soapy back room, reluctantly submitted to an interview.

Through a series of grunts, Sun Sing made two things clear: First, he didn't know that there was a threat of war, and, second, he didn't give a Chinese whoop if there was.

The interview broke up when the reporter got personal. He wanted to know if there was any possibility that Sun Sing would go back to fight if war did break out. For answer, Sun Sing threw him an insulting look and padded back to his washing.

A dozen Chinese in the colony were interviewed after that. They were found smoking in the store of the Kim Lai Yuen Co., 325 Pennsylvania avenue; Wah Chong's grocery store, at No. 315, and the Hong Ai Importing Co., at No. 343.

Only one Chinese knew that any trouble was brewing, and his information was more than a week old. And herein lies a fact that partly explains Chinatown's apathy in the present crisis.

The Chinese along lower Pennsylvania avenue depend for their news almost entirely on a Chinese-language newspaper published in San Francisco, which by the time they read it is a week old. Thus they will have to wait to the end of this week before they know that the Russians fired at Chinese troops Sunday night.

Most of the Chinese here come from around Canton in southern China, and they are about as much interested in what goes on in northern Manchuria as a Mexican peon is in the affairs of an Alaskan seal fisherman.

Moreover, while the homeland may have been known as the celestial kingdom, the local Chinese conception of an earthly heaven is the 300 block of Pennsylvania avenue.

NEWS of SUBURBAN Washington and the Surrounding States

Appears on Pages 4, 5 and 18 Today

the peace of eastern Asia China reiterating her desire for peaceful settlement of the dispute with Soviet Russia over the Chinese Eastern Railway, the Far East continued to produce alarmist reports of preparations for war.

Chinese and Japanese news agencies carried dispatches giving details of troop movements on the borders of Manchuria and telling of Chinese refugees pouring into Harbin, while Russians in that city have been put under close surveillance by Chinese authorities.

Despite the rumors there have been no clashes between Russian and Chinese forces, according to information sent tonight by neutral observers. An unconfirmed Japanese news agency message said that a Chinese river gunboat has been captured by Russians on the Amur River along the north Manchurian frontier.

Observers here estimate that seven divisions of Chinese infantry and one regiment of artillery is assembling in the region of Manchuli, the northwestern terminus of the Chinese Eastern Railway and 50,000 troops are supposed to be gathered in the region of Pogranichnaya, on the eastern border.

Pogranichnaya, whose Russian name means "near the border," is called Suifen in Chinese. Reports of trouble have been received from both these sources. At this strategic point the Chinese Eastern Railway links with the Ussuri line which extends on about 100 miles to Vladivostok.

China Plans League Appeal.

Nanking, China, July 22 (A.P.).—China tonight was ready to summon the aid of both the League of Nations and the Kellogg pact to maintain peace in her dispute with Russia over the Chinese Eastern Railway.

Foreign Minister C. T. Wang, of the Nationalist government, announced tonight that "China will appeal to the League of Nations in connection with the Russian crisis if the Soviet violates the spirit of the Kellogg pact."

In addition, the Nationalist government planned to send Moscow a note reiterating its desire to settle the dispute by peaceful negotiation. This note is being drafted and was expected to be sent tomorrow.

It was further surmised that the Nationalists would express the hope in the note that Moscow would see fit to send a plenipotentiary to Harbin for discussion of the situation with a similar plenipotentiary from China.

Chu Shao Min, Chinese charge d'affaires at Moscow who is now in Nanking, was understood to be leaving immediately for Harbin in the hope that Russia would agree to send a representative. The government was ready to send him on to Moscow if necessary in order to hold the conversations.

Railway Minister Leaves.

Sun Fo, minister of railways, left Nanking for Peiping, and it was understood he planned to go to Harbin in connection with affairs of the Chinese Eastern railway.

The government also planned to send Great Britain, the United States, France, Germany and Japan identical notes explaining the Chinese side of the dispute.

Seized Documents Published.

New York, July 22 (A.P.).—The Kiu Min News Agency today published a Shanghai dispatch saying the Nanking government was publishing there in installments documents seized in the Russian consulate in Harbin, Manchuria, on May 27. It was said that much material was burned while the raiders were held out by barred doors and that preparations for burning were apparent after entry by the Chinese.

Among the papers seized was an alleged memorandum of "steps to be taken toward world revolution by the Eastern Third Communist International." These steps included expulsion of all foreign capitalists from China and confiscation of lands and property of "oppressive" landlords.

It was charged that secret codes of the Communist party were found on some of the 42 persons arrested.

Chinese action in expelling the Russian administration of the Chinese Eastern Railway was based on their charges that the administration had furthered Soviet propaganda.

Berlin, July 22 (A.P.).—A Kovno dispatch of the Telegrafen Union says that former Commander of the Moscow Military District Kujbischew had been given supreme command of the Russian forces, which he will take over at Blagovyeshchensk, Siberia.

Youngest of Episcopal Bishops to Wed in Fall

Chicago, July 22 (A.P.).—Announcement of the engagement of Miss Eleanor Lorinda Hall, daughter of Mrs. William Tileston Hall, of Evanston, Ill., to the Right Rev. Frank Elmer Wilson, D. D., of Eau Claire, Wis., was made today. Dr. Wilson is the youngest Episcopal bishop in the country. The marriage will take place in the fall.

Bishop Wilson is 44 years old. Episcopal churchmen said the marriage of a bishop subsequent to his elevation to the high church office is an unusual event.

Expulsion of Editor Voted by Communists

Berlin, July 22 (A.P.).—A news agency dispatch from Moscow today said the executive committee of the communist international had expelled Nikolai Bucharin, prominent leader and editor of the newspaper Pravda. Six other members of the right wing opposition were said to have been expelled at the same time.

The same dispatch announced a resolution urging communists of all countries to hold a general strike August 1 as a protest against the seizure of the Chinese Eastern Railway.

CHINESE, RUSSIANS REASSURE STIMSON

Each Government Promises to Countenance War Only in Self-Defense.

OTHER POWERS ARE BUSY

(Associated Press.)

Assurances that they would abide by the Kellogg anti-war treaty and would countenance war only as an act of self-defense reached the State Department yesterday from the Chinese and Russian governments.

Simultaneously, the Japanese government advised that it was cooperating fully with Secretary Stimson in his efforts to avoid war over the Chinese Eastern Railway.

France has been cooperating since the first move by Mr. Stimson Thursday in taking steps to call to the attention of the two governments their obligations under the pact renouncing war.

Great Britain, France and Japan were consulted by Secretary Stimson as interested powers in the Far East as parties under the Pan-Pacific treaty of 1921. Sir Esme Howard, the British Ambassador, advised Secretary Stimson of the full support of his government Sunday.

Claudel Brings News.

French Ambassador Claudel first discussed the general situation with the Secretary early yesterday and later returned to inform him the Soviet Ambassador in Paris had advised Foreign Minister Briand that his government would avoid hostilities except as a matter of self-defense.

Chinese Minister Wu received a lengthy telegram from his government and immediately left the Legation for the State Department to tell Mr. Stimson of the favorable trend of the reply before waiting for the entire message to be decoded. Secretary Stimson said the Chinese government disclaimed any intention of seizing the Chinese Eastern Railway or any desire for war except as a defense measure. After his conference with the secretary, Minister Wu explained that the attitude of his government was that the railway had not been seized, but that the Russian employes had merely been dismissed.

Two Diplomats Called In.

Japanese Ambassador Debuchi, Mr Stimson said, informed him he had received a communication from his government that Baron Shidehara, the foreign minister, on July 19, called in the Russian ambassador and Chinese minister in Tokyo and informed them of his desires that hostilities be avoided. Mr. Stimson added that Ambassador Debuchi had advised him the Japanese government's information on the general situation was to the effect that there has been no occupation of any territory of one country by the other and no clash or hostilities has occurred as far as the Japanese government knows.

There has not even been a skirmish on the border, Mr. Stimson said the Ambassador told him, but the railroad has been interrupted, causing great inconvenience, and there has apparently been some movement of troops on the Russian side, apparently merely precautionary.

Secretary Stimson said international law and custom leaves open a large field from which machinery to settle the dispute amicably may be chosen.

Frank B. Kellogg, who as the last Secretary of State, followed the occurrences in China closely, called on Secretary Stimson yesterday and discussed at length the Sino-Russian situation. Mr. Kellogg assured the Secretary that he was convinced the two nations will not resort to war.

Chinese Charge Conspiracy.

A statement from the Chinese Legation last night characterized as "an act of self-defense" the arrest of Soviet officials and employes of the Chinese Eastern Railway and of Soviet trading associations. It reiterated that the action should not be regarded as a seizure.

Chinese authorities, it said, will soon publish evidence to show a Soviet conspiracy "to endanger the safety of the Chinese government; to organize a corps of assassins who were to be active in Nanking, Mukden and other Chinese cities; and to injure the Chinese Eastern Railway."

The arrest of the Soviet railway and trading association officials and employes was stated to have been "merely the timely prevention of activities which were dangerous to the safety of the Chinese government, state and, indeed, society."

San Antonio Host To General Calles

Mexican Leader, En Route to Paris, Declines to Answer Queries.

San Antonio, Tex., July 22 (A.P.).—Bound for Europe and "in search of health," Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, of Mexico, passed through San Antonio this afternoon, declining to make any statement other than that he is taking a vacation at his doctor's orders.

Gen. Calles answered all questions as to the purpose of his trip with, "I am in search of health." He said he would go as directly as possible to Paris, returning to Mexico when his doctors give him permission.

During his short stay here the general was greeted by the mayor and city commissioners as well as leaders of loyal Mexican organizations and attaches to the general consular office.

Leroy Scott Drowned While Swimming Lake

Plattsburgh, N. Y., July 22 (A.P.).—Leroy Scott, the author, was drowned while swimming yesterday in Chateugay Lake, 25 miles from here, State troopers disclosed. A canoeist said she saw him go down while trying to swim across the lake. The body has not been recovered.

Leroy Scott was born in Fairmont, Ind., May 11, 1875. He was graduated from Indiana University in 1897 and seven years later he married Miriam Finn, of New York. At one time he was assistant editor of Woman's Home Companion.

His novel, "No. 13 Washington Square," published in 1914, was dramatized a year later. Among several books he wrote were "To Him That Hath," "Partners of the Night," "A Daughter of Two Worlds," and "Children of the Whirlwind."

Infantile Paralysis Visits 11 in Roanoke

Roanoke, Va., July 22 (A.P.).—The health department announced here today that there were eleven cases of infantile paralysis in the city. It suggested among other things that children be kept from public gathering to prevent an increase of the malady.

MANCHURIAN RAILROAD CRUX OF FAR EASTERN QUESTION

Its history has been colorful. Under the original term of the agreement between China and Russia in 1896 it was provided that the president of the railroad should always be a Chinese and should reside in Peking. At the death of this first official in 1903, the presidency fell to the vice president, a Russian and an officer of the ministry of finance at St. Petersburg, and he continued to hold sway until the collapse of the Russian imperial regime.

Throughout that period the Chinese Eastern Railway in theory was governed by a board of directors under the ministry of finance at St. Petersburg. Constantly under the direction of the minister himself, the board exercised a certain degree of supervision through the device of a revision committee, whose representatives were attached to each department of the railroad and enjoyed the right of criticism, and, to a certain degree, of censorship.

The direction of the line actually was in the hands of the general manager, who resided at Harbin. This powerful personage not only stood at the head of all Russian civil administration within the railway zone, with full direction of the railway, including the accounting department, police control, maintenance of way and equipment, transportation and the making of rates and muicipal legislation, but he also served as commander in chief of Russias military forces in the railway zone in the latter years of the czar's reign.

Thus the Chinese Eastern played the dual role as an industrial institution and a kind of political state, with the general manager possessed virtually of the powers of a dictator, responsible in practice only to the will of his imperial master.

Prior to the World War, the policy of the Russian management operated the Chinese Eastern primarily in a manner to snub Manchuria by discouraging local industry in favor of developing the Russian port of Vladivostok both for import and export trade. Soy bean production in the three provinces was soaring to new levels despite the policy and it came to constitute the principal freight of the railroad without benefiting local industry to any appreciable extent.

The policy wrote its own story of failure. In 1913 the railway showed a deficit of $2,967,129 and in 1914 the loss tumbled to $2,256,458, which the Russian government made up. The World War made the road the vital link in the transsiberian transportation system, with military freight and war materials forming the bulk of the shipments to the sacrifice of local freight. Harbin, as the strategic point in the area, naturally prospered.

The downfall of imperial Russia naturally had a sweeping aftermath. The revolution demoralized the technical condition of the railway, discipline became lax, and transportation diminished to an alarming extent, the climax being reached during the latter part of 1919. The Russian government refused further support and the railway was receiving worthless paper money.

The Peking government and the Russo-Asiatic Bank in October of the following year came to an agreement "in regard to the temporary management of the railway," as one observer has pointed out. Instead of St. Petersburg in Russia, Harbin became the residence of a new board of directors with the president once more a Chinese, and five members among the ten his own countrymen.

More important in the light of subsequent events and the sweep of war clouds, Chinese military authorities assumed police control. In each department a Chinese was named assistant chief, with powers limited in the main to observation rather than direction. All civil institutions in the railway zone which were formerly under the railway control then became subject to Chinese civil administration.

A new economic bureau started to study the resources of the country and learned that many products were not being transported by rail. An agricultural department was formed, three agricultural stations were opened to encourage agriculture; breeding of dairy cattle was introduced; a veterinary inspection system was installed; a wool-washing plant was erected; lumbering was developed by the building of railway sidings and local industries, including coal mining and the raising of sugar beets, were promoted. Commercial agencies also were established for the purpose of attracting freight and rates were reduced.

There was a brief flurry of trouble when friction arose between the railway and the local Chinese authorities in 1923 regarding the jurisdiction over lands belonging to the road. An agreement was reached in the fall of 1924 and a new board and general manager were appointed. Today the Chinese Eastern Railway boasts express trains that are among the best in the world and the properties are valued very highly.

Thus, this powerful transportation system, coupled with modern science and industry, is performing a miracle in a land which only a generation ago was an almost unknown region, a virtual wilderness and a habitat of nomads. Its boom expansion is epitomized in the spurt of Harbin from a swampy, little fishing village of a few mud huts to a metropolis, pulsating with an energy and enthusiasm that is affording a dramatic spectacle.

Manchuria is proving the land of opportunity for the great human stream that is pouring across its borders in an exodus that in 1928 was conservatively estimated to have sent from two to four million Chinese there. Many factors are contributing to this momentous migration, with the famous droughts of 1920 and 1927, the floods of 1924 in the Chihli plains, and the miseries of warfare responsible in the main for this northward surge.

The attractiveness of the three provinces today and in a future even more roseate, both to China and Russia, apart from its desirability to an already overpopulated Japan, is glaringly apparent.

As early as 1928 representatives of the U. S. Department of Commerce in China carefully noted the trend of events and the possibilities of conflict in Manchuria. Their customarily conservative reports in this instance minced no words in revealing the impending dangers.

"It is too early to forecast the possible changes that must result from the settlement with the Russian Soviet government, although important changes are bound to take place," the report stated. "It is not impossible that the Russian representatives will endeavor eventually to recover civil administration within the railway zone."

One Far Eastern writer, in portraying conditions in Manchuria, declared that "as years roll by, it will play an increasingly important part in the economic progress in the Orient, and in the drama of international rivalries that is so ominously unfolded there. It may yet prove to be the scene of another armed conflict."

The seriousness of events during the past few years in the three provinces evoked in December a dire prophecy from the pen of Thomas F. Millard, one of the best known authorities on the Orient:

"In Manchuria one can perceive another great war in the making. I venture the opinion that when, and if, it comes, the other principal Pacific Ocean powers will be drawn into the war before it ends."

TWO U. S. MARINES DIE IN PLANE CRASH

Captain and Private Killed as Craft Hits River in Nicaragua.

TWO DEAD IN CALIFORNIA

Managua, Nicaragua, July 22 (A.P.).—A United States Marine Corps Fokker plane crashed into the Colo River near Octoal City, Nueva Serovia department, northern Nicaragua, at 10 o'clock today killing Capt. Euvelle D. Howard, of California, the pilot. Flight Mechanic Private Robert K. Moody and Lieut. Clarence M. Knight, attached to the United States Marine detachment at Paracaquina, northern Nicaragua, who were flying as passenger, were injured. Private Moody died soon afterward. Lieut. Knight was seriously injured, but his condition tonight was said to be hopeful.

The next of kin of Capt. Howard is his mother, Mrs. Maude D. Howard, of Oakland, Calif. The next of kin of Private Moody is his father, George E. Moody, of Galion, Ohio. Further details of the accident have not been received. Upon receipt of the news three planes left the United States Marine Corps aviation field at Managua at 11 o'clock this morning and will return with the body of Capt. Howard and the injured men early this afternoon.

Santa Barbara, Calif., July 22 (A.P.).—Elmer C. Brown, 36, and Stephen S. Nerney, Hollywood, Calif., aviators, were killed here this afternoon when their airplane was wrecked after it struck some trees at an airport where the men had attempted to land.

1,000 Die as Temblor Devastates Anatolia

Constantinople, July 22 (A.P.).—Latest reports from northern Anatolia state that recent earthquakes and landslides have caused the deaths of 1,000 persons. Ten thousand are homeless and without food. As reports of the disaster continued the Turkish Red Crescent Society began rushing aid to the assistance of the victims while the Constantinople press is appealing for the help of the international Red Cross.

Shocks and landslides, the latter caused by torrential rains, were reported to be increasing the havoc in northern Anatolia where recent inundations devastated the towns of Sumene and Rizer.

British Will Continue Russian Negotiations

London, July 22 (A.P.).—Foreign Secretary Henderson told the House of Commons today that the present situation between China and Russia would not cause the British government to defer resumption of negotiations regarding diplomatic relations between Great Britain and Russia.

This statement was in reply to a written question by Lieut. Col. A. P. Heneage, conservative.

OVERMAN DEMANDS EXPULSION OF POLE

Spreader of Propaganda in War, Says Senator in Letter to Hull.

CALLS HIM UNDESIRABLE

Senator Lee S. Overman (Democrat), of North Carolina, who in 1918 and 1919 was chairman of a subcommittee of the judiciary committee of the Senate to investigate German propaganda, today asked that Louis N. Hammerling, president of the American Foreign Language Newspapers, Inc., be deported an an undesirable. He wrote a letter to Commissioner Harry Hull, of the Bureau of Immigration, telling him that Hammerling is in New York and requested an explanation of his presence.

"It has been brought to my attention through sources that are highly trustworthy and reliable that at the present time there is residing in New York City a man by the name of Louis H. Hammerling, who for a good many years has been a duly elected Polish senator," Mr. Overman told Mr. Hull.

"Hammerling first became known to me in 1918 when he appeared before a committee of the United States Senate, of which I was chairman, which was investigating certain prewing, liquor and German propaganda interests in this country. He had been in this country for quite a number of years, but in 1924, largely as the result of certain exposes made by my committee, this man's citizenship was taken away from him by the courts of New York. This action was taken under date of April 23, 1924.

Forced to Leave U. S.

"He was then forced to return to Poland, but since then has journeyed back here many times and, as stated above, is now in New York City. I have also been informed that under date of June 28, 1929, he organized under the laws of New York State the American Foreign Language Newspapers, Inc., with a capital stock of $100,000, of which he is not only the president but the controlling interest.

"I must be frank and tell you, my dear commissioner, that I am vitally interested in this matter; in fact, just as much so as I was in 1918 and 1919. I want to know at the earliest possible date by what authority of law this man is permitted to come to this country and also why he is allowed to remain here in view of the facts that his citizenship has been revoked. Surely if he is an undesirable citizen he is most certainly not a desirable visitor."

Mr. Overman said that Hammerling was summoned to appear before his committee in 1918 and 1919 so it could ascertain what part he was taking, or had taken, in the German propaganda which was being carried on in this country. Mr. Hull was asked by Mr. Overman why Hammerling is permitted to come to the United States and engage in business in strict violation of the "quota law."

Reported to Senate.

In a report to the Senate June 16, 1919, on German propaganda, Mr. Overman said: "In their efforts to create a sentiment in the United States against the manufacture and shipment of munitions to the allies, the German agents, under the direction of Dr. Albert, acting through Dr Rumley, undertook the preparation and publication, in April of 1915, of what was known of an appeal to the American people, which was published in most of the foreign language newspapers of the United States on or about the 5th of April, 1915, and in about 70 of the principal daily papers published in the English language. This propaganda was handled by Louis N. Hammerling, president of the American Association of Foreign Language Newspapers. A great deal of evidence has been given concerning the operations of this association in connection with the propoganda conducted for the United States Brewers Association."

Hammerling appeared before the Senate committee.

Commissioner Hull has not received Senator Overman's letter, but his office is looking into the status of Hammerling.

Water in Gasoline Foils Hoyt Flight

Forced Landing Damages Plane Beyond Repair in Remote Place.

Vancouver, B. C., July 22 (A.P.).—His attempted round trip air dash from Mitchel Field, N. Y., to Nome, Alaska, halted by water in his fuel which brought his plane to an emergency landing in a little clearing in the Canadian Rockies, Capt. Ross G. Hoyt of the United States Army today was carrying forward plans for a return to New York by rail.

Capt. Hoyt landed at Valemount, a little settlement 10 miles from Albreda, B. C., on the main line of the Canadian National Railway last night. His plane was damaged in landing beyond Valemounts capacity for repair and Capt. Hoyt plans to dismantle it and ship it back to New York.

The flight was attempted to test the feasibility of fighting planes with long cruising range for use in protecting the United States far flung boundary lines in case of war.

FOUR HELD IN THEFT OF $42,000 AT BANK

Birmingham Police Also Link Two Others With Hold-ups Elsewhere.

THREE WOMEN SEIZED

Birmingham, Ala., July 22 (A.P.).—The arrest of four persons in connection with last week's $42,000 hold-up in New Orleans, and identification of two others with robberies in Texas and Georgia, was effected today by the bureau of identification of the Birmingham police department.

Four of the suspects, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Cascio, of Shreveport, and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Robertson, of Hornersville, Mo., were arrested for New Orleans authorities.

Cascio was sleeping with a German-made machine gun beneath his pillow when Superintendent M. E. McDuff and two detectives of the identification bureau entered the hotel room he and his companions occupied. The machine had 26 notches in its stock which Cascio did not explain.

Robertson was armed with a revolver. Both denied connection with any robbery. A telegram from Monroe, La., police said Cascio is wanted there, although the charge was not given.

Mrs. Delois Walker, who was arrested here June 29 on a vagrancy charge, while at the wheel of an expensive automobile, was identified as the woman who held up a Tapoka, Tex., bank and a jewelry store at Lubbock, in the same State. She defaulted the $20,000 bond posted in the latter case, McDuff said. She waived extradition and Texas authorities were reported en route for her.

Ernest Smith, alais Conway, was identified from records of the Federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan., as the robber who attempted to hold up an Aragon, Ga., mill in which a murder was committed. The robbery was frustrated by police. Smith, who said he was from Decatur, Ala., and had never been in Aragon, is in custody in Gadsden, Ala., on a charge of robbing a laundry company's safe of a considerable sum of money.

Arkansas Bribery Indictment Voided

Member of Rail Board Held in Bond for Another Jury.

Little Rock, July 22 (A.P.).—The defense demurrer to the indictment charging R. E. Caudle, member of the Arkansas Railroad Commission, with attempted bribery, was sustained by Circuit Judge Marvin Harris today. Caudle, however, was ordered held under his present bond until the next grand jury, which meets in September, can consider the case again. The demurrer alleged the indictment was indefinite as to the charge.

The indictment charged Caudle with offering a bribe to State Senator John M. Quarles for his vote in favor of the bill to legalize parimutuel betting on horse racing during the legislative session early this year.

Boyd Cypert, prosecuting attorney, announced he will appeal to the supreme court from the ruling of Judge Harris sustaining the demurrer, and defense attorneys said they will appeal from the judge's action in holding Caudle under bond until the next grand jury.

Strike Mediator On Way to Capital

New Hope for Ending New Orleans Street Car Row Seen.

New Orleans, La., July 22 (A.P.).—While the city commission council exerted pressure on officials of the union and company to settle the street car strike, H. D. Dynes, Federal Labor Department mediator, left for Washington to explain the situation to Government officials.

Charles Rosen, counsel for Public Service, Inc., left on the same train, but it was not known whether they went together by prearrangement.

At a joint conference of representatives of the union and company before the city council, A. D. Patterson, general manager of Public Service, which previously had announced its refusal to deal further with the union, said that if the council or the union wished to submit another proposal he would lay it before his board of directors. This was regarded by officials as probably opening the way for negotiations that might break the strike started on July 2.

Hungary and Bulgaria Sign Arbitration Pact

Budapest, Hungary, July 22 (A.P.).—Hungary and Bulgaria have concluded a treaty of conciliation and arbitration by which a permanent commission will be appointed to deal with matters in dispute between the two countries. An arbitral tribunal will be constituted only in cases of emergency for the decision of judicial contests. Both parties may apply also to the world court. The treaty has a life of five years.

Motorcycle Hits Pole; Two Sailors Are Killed

Norwich, Conn., July 22 (A.P.).—Two sailors were killed here today when their motorcycle left the road and crashed into a telegraph pole. They were Roy S. Cook, of Fort Worth, Tex., and Max Tanffherchen, of New London, Conn. The men were attached to the submarine base at New London, Conn.

Chinese Drug Case To Be Tried in U. S.

Former Consul, Wife and Aid Not to Be Sent to Orient.

San Francisco, July 22 (A.P.).—Acting on orders from Washington, the United States district attorney's office announced today that Ying Kao, former Chinese vice consul; his wife and Sun Foon, former chancellor of the consulate, would be prosecuted here in connection with the recent seizure of nearly $1,000,000 worth of smuggled opium.

Previously there had been some doubt as to whether the defendants would be tried here or returned to China to face the courts of that country.

Preliminary hearing, which was authorized in a telegram from Washington, was postponed today at the request of the district attorney's office, which asked more time to prepare the case. It was indicated actual trial of the Chinese will be deferred until further orders from Washington.

An Open Book on Banking

Factors of Sound Investments

BY these three cardinal principles, you can distinguish investments from speculations—safety—marketability—and income.

The stock or bond you buy must have plenty of absolutely sound assets back of it to keep you from losing your principal—that's safety.

It must be so well regarded that other persons with money will be willing to buy it—that's marketability.

The less risk you take—the less you earn—hence the rate or income is low on the highest grades of securities.

Build your financial basis for investment here. Accumulate a good cash reserve—helped by the interest we pay. Feel that you are on substantial footing.

VIEWS OF HOOVER ON TARIFF SOUGHT

SENATOR PLANNING FIGH

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover was called upon to give his views on the House tariff bill yesterday by Senator La Follette (Republican), Wisconsin, as the Republicans of the Senate finance committee started revision of that measure in executive session.

"After dictating the terms of the farm bill and condemning the debenture plan in unmeasured terms," the Wisconsin senator said in a statement, "the President can not with very good grace remain neutral and silent on the tariff."

Senator La Follette is a member of the Republican independent group which is opposing the House measure and he promised a "determined and uncompromising fight on the floor of the Senate."

Shortridge Issues Statement.

From the finance committee workroom came a lengthy statement by Senator Shortridge, of California, in which he declared: "The Republican party proposes to enact a tariff law which shall have due and first regard for American men, women and children—on the farm, in the mines, in mill or factory—for the producer and consumer alike—who, without adequate tariff protection, will be forced into competition with poorly paid, cheap labor of other and less prosperous countries."

The Californian's statement was regarded by some as forecasting about as general a tariff revision by the Senate committee as was provided by the House, although other members of the Republican group on the committee continued to predict a downward scaling of some of the tariff increases voted by the House.

Valuation Question Laid Aside.

The question of valuation was taken up at the first executive session of the Republicans and after hearing experts from the Treasury and customs service, they laid aside the proposition pending the preparation of some alternative scheme to the House valuation basis.

The committee then turned to the first schedule in the bill, dealing with chemicals. The fact that it was ready to go ahead immediately with consideration of the rate was accepted as indicative that there would be little modification, if any, of the valuation basis proposed by the House.

Chairman Smoot was still working yesterday over his sliding scale for sugar, which he intends to submit for committee consideration as a possible substitute for the flat increase in the tariff on sugar provided in the House measure. He will present his scheme when the sugar schedule is reached. Meanwhile, reports were heard that the sugar producers were at odds over a sliding scale.

Father of Clara Bow Is Divorced by Mate

Los Angeles, July 22 (A.P.).—Tui Lorraine Bow, 21, former stage dancer, obtained a divorce in superior court here today from Robert Bow, 45, father of Clara Bow, film actress, on the ground of insane jealousy. A property settlement was made out of court.

Bow obtained an annulment of a marriage to another young woman a year ago on the ground she was a "gold digger" and gave no affection in return for his presents and money. Shortly afterward he married Tui Lorraine, who was about to be deported for overstaying her temporary leave to visit in the United States. The marriage made her an American citizen.

Tui Lorraine Bow came here from Australia and was born in New Zealand.

The Listening Post

By CARLISLE BARGERON

THE utter unfairness of the Democratic statement barrage against the Republicans is already apparent to any one who has followed the Washington statement-making game and who wants to see it kept on a high sporting plane.

It has taken the Republicans wholly by surprise and found them altogether unprepared. And now when they are coming to a realization of what is happening, after the Democratic attack has been underway for several weeks, they do not know how to meet it. They are fully organized, but the very nature of their organization makes them helpless in such a case as this.

* * * *

ONE would think offhand that all the Republicans had to do would be to turn their national committee loose at the business of statement making. Dr. Work is so confidential and secret that he, of course, would not be a good one for the statement-making job. But one of Michaelson's capabilities could readily be taken on.

Yet, and here is the first hitch, if the Republican national committee began any such activity as this it would detract from the Republicans great selling point, their beacon to whom they always point with pride, the President.

It would soon resolve into a battle of the two committees, that of the Democrats and the Republicans, and the President would be lost sight of. No organization would agree to this. The headliners of any industry are the ones shoved out in front. Certainly, the President is the headliner of the Republicans. All other components of the organization are lesser lights.

A MORE real and important danger would lie in the fact, however, that the national committee is looked upon as the President's own. It is his aggregation of trained seals his bodyguard in politics.

If the Republican committee got around to making statements, to answering the Democrats, everything it said would be taken as the word of the President. And he could not afford to be held responsible for everything a national committee would be likely to say. He would, in fact, be in hot water most of the time.

The Democrats are not so handicapped. They have no President. There is no reason why their national committee should not be out in front. It is so unusual that they have one, in fact, that it would be foolish to try to hide it. It is something to be proud of, something that appears well in the dazzling lights.

* * * *

SENATOR WATSON, the Republican leader, has sought to devise some ways and means of combating the Democratic headquarters' attack. Every time Michaelson goes around and puts a statement-making idea in a Democratic senator's head, Watson picks himself out a Republican and suggests a statement to him.

But obviously, he has other work to do. Under his guiding wing a lot of Republicans are beginning to speak up, to try to out-shout the Democrats. He has even developed a quite scholarly statement from the scholarly Senator Shortridge. But he can't keep this up. It is doubtful, in the first place, if he is as good statement developer as Michaelson, who has spent his life developing statements for the newspapers. At any rate, Watson should be given an assistant. Perhaps, another Republican whip, with nothing to do but develop statements, would not be amiss.

GUARD CALLED OUT TO AVERT LYNCHING

though there was considerable tension there and in neighboring southwestern Georgia counties.

Bouyer was arrested at Speigners, 20 miles from here a week after Hines had been killed as he sat in an automobile with Miss Clark. The young woman told authorities that Bouyer, whom she identified, dragged her from the automobile and assaulted her after she had been clubbed into submission. She was one of the six witnesses to appear before the Barbour County grand jury during its two-hour session today.

Guard units were called out here nearly ten years ago when a mob threatened to storm the county jail for a negro murderer. The mob was dispersed with a few minor casualties.

A detachment of 50 National Guardsmen, under command of Capt. John Snider, left here late today for Eufaula to establish a guard around the county courthouse there preparatory to the arrival early tomorrow of the remainder of the contingent with the negro.

Barbour County has county courthouses at both Clayton and Eufaula and it was the desire of county authorities that the negro be arraigned and tried near the scene of the crime.

London on a charge of manslaughter, is a son of the late R. J. Reynolds, founder of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., it was stated here today.

Young Reynolds is one of the largest stockholders in the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. and of recent years has been interested in aviation. He is an official of the Curtiss Flying Co. of New York and through this company owns and operates Curtiss Field and a number of other aviation fields throughout the country.

When Reynolds was first arrested in England none of his friends or relatives would say whether or not the accused man was the son of the late tobacco magnate. George Orr, an attorney for the Reynolds estate, left here some days ago for London to assist young Reynolds.

Reynolds about two years ago created a furore throughout the country by disappearing for several days. He was found in St. Louis, where he had gone with a friend on a "vacation."

Georgia's First Bale Brings 60½ Cents

Atlanta, Ga., July 22 (A.P.).—Georgia's first bale of the 1929 cotton crop sold in Atlanta today for 60½ cents a pound. It was auctioned off at the Atlanta Commercial Exchange. Half of the proceeds will go to the Tift County Hospital and half to the grower, J. P. Cook, of Tift County. The bale weighed 328 pounds and was described as good middling.

BREMEN MAKES NEW RECORD ON ATLANTIC

public squares of all decks. The direction finders are like low bridge tables, with a series of buttons. A passenger, wishing to find any portion of the ship, merely presses a button marked for that part and the chart lights up, showing the route to be taken.

Still another novelty is the night club, perched high on the sports deck where festivities can continue until 6 a. m. without disturbing passengers whose thoughts at that moment might lie in other directions.

For speed, the Bremen on each full day, managed to top the best the Mauretania has ever done—676 miles. On the first full day, from Thursday to Friday noon, the Bremen logged 687 miles, during what the log described as "rather rough seas."

Still drilling away, on the second day, Capt. Ziegenbein shot this up to 704 miles, and on Sunday noon added another mile to that world record by covering 705 miles. As a final triumph, he dashed down the coast and at yesterday's noon position, found that he had traveled 713 miles, at the highest average yet attained of 29.6 knots.

Notes Reduced Speed.

Perhaps as a touch of irony, on the two last days Capt. Ziegenbein noted in his log on both occasions—"reduced speed."

"Generally fair," this Sunday entry read, "slight sea. Patches of fog. Reduced speed."

His last reduction of speed came at 1 p. m. yesterday when he paused for a brief moment while the Bremen's catapult flung the seaplane New York into the air off Fire Island. Forty minutes later the plane was unloading mail at the pier.

Ship Not Extended.

"I didn't extend the ship," he said, "and I have every hope of bettering this mark. I think she can easily make 30 knots."

The Bremen's new record was made on the B or middle track, which is 49 miles longer than the short course, used by the Mauretania in making her record. The short course is not taken until late in the year, when ship lanes are free of icebergs.

The new mark also tops the Mauretania's best eastbound mark of five days, 1 hour and 49 minutes. The eastbound records are faster, because of the aid of the Gulf Steam's current. And just to show her unqualified claim to the title the Bremen, coming from Cherbourg, made better time than the world's record from Plymouth to New York of four days, 21 hours and 51 minutes, also held by the Mauretania.

Ship Is Streamlined.

Everything in the ship has been streamlined to cut down head resistance. The forward superstructure curves in this line, instead of the usual bluff, upright effect.

Many new features are found in her hull design. While her bow above water is sharp and rakish, below the water line she has the "bulb" bow. This design enables the ship to press the water down, instead of pressing it to either side.

With a length of 938 feet, she is slightly shorter than the Majestic, which is 954 feet long. Her beam is 98 feet.

When completed, her measurements gave a tonnage slightly less than 50,000, which makes her the fourth largest ship afloat.

She has accommodations for 2,200 passengers and carries a crew of 950.

New Chicago-to-Dallas Air-Rail Service to Begin

Chicago, July 22 (A.P.).—The Illinois Central System and the Southwest Air Fast Express, Inc., will place in operation a new airplane-rail service between Chicago and Dallas, Tex., effective August 1, it was announced today.

Travelers will go by train from Chicago to St. Louis, where they will transfer to airplanes for Springfield, Mo.; Tulsa, Okla.; Oklahoma City, Okla.; Wichita Falls, Fort Worth and Dallas, Tex. Passengers will be enabled to arrive in Dallas 17 hours after leaving Chicago, and by extensions of the service to reach Los Angeles in 42 hours.

John Gilbert and Bride Reach Ohio by Plane

Columbus, Ohio, July 22 (A.P.).—John Gilbert and his bride, the former Ina Claire, movie stars, arrived here tonight aboard the Transcontinental Air Transport plane from Waynoka, Okla., on a belated honeymoon. They took the Airway Limited train for New York, where they will sail soon for Europe.

FRANCE TO DEBATE DEBT ACCORD TODAY

Adoption of Present Text Is Recommended by Finance Body.

TALK WILL BE PROFOUND

Paris, July 22 (A.P.).—The French senate will inaugurate debate on ratification of the Mellon-Berenger debt settlement bill at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

The finance committee today recommended adoption of the text of the bill exactly in the form it was voted by the chamber of deputies early Sunday morning. The foreign affairs committee of the senate was expected to make its report today, but it was announced its recommendation will not be available before noon tomorrow. It is understood there will be more opposition to unconditional ratification in the foreign affairs committee than in the committee on finance.

The senate debate promises to be of a high-class character, as among the speakers are former President Millerand, Senator Henry Berenger, who negotiated the accord with Secretary Mellon, also former Premier Caillaux, who failed in his attempt to settle the debt question on his new memorable trip to Washington; Senator Henry de Jouvenel, former high commissioner of Syria, and Senator Lucian Hubert, president of the foreign affairs committee.

Because of the delay of the foreign affairs committee's report, the final vote is not expected before Friday.

Like the Chamber, the Senate will have to ratify the Mellon-Berengen accord in the absence of Premier Poincare, who is not expected to be sufficiently recovered in health to attend the sessions of the debate.

While physicians announce the premier continues to improve, Mme. Poincare is said to be very desirous of going to Sampligny, the premier's country residence in Meuse department, where the absolute quiet and repose which M. Poincare needs may be had, thus giving him an opportunity to recover strength before the opening of the conference of foreign ministers on August 6, dealing with the acceptance of the Young plan for reparations.

Premier Poincare himself is opposed to leaving Paris, and it is understood that physicians will have the final say on his case.

Ship Hits Iceberg; Asks Assistance

Steamship Viniera Requests Tug to Tow Her Into Halifax.

St. John's, N. F., July 22 (A.P.).—Lloyd's agents here received a message today from the steamship Viniera reporting that she had hit an iceberg and requesting a tug to tow her to Halifax.

The Viniera said she was unable to use her engines.

The position of the ship in the message was given at 42.40 north and 49.44 west.

New York, July 22 (A.P.).—Available shipping records do not list a steamer "Viniera," the name given by a steamer reporting herself in collision with a iceberg off the Grand Banks.

There is, however, a tank steamer named Vimeira from New Orleans July 11 bound for London, which should be in the vicinity of the Grand Banks. The Vimeira is of British registry, owned by the Vimeira Steamship Co. of Glasgow, is 410 feet long and of 5,725 gross tons.

Man Dead, 2 Hurt In Pistol Battle

Two Deputy Sheriffs Are Injured as Fugitive Fights Them.

Florence, Ala., July 22 (A.P.).—A negro was killed and two Franklin County deputy sheriffs were dangerously wounded in a pitched gun battle three miles from Russellville early yesterday morning. Ed Tidewell and J. C. Tyre, the deputies, are in a hospital at Florence. Attending physicians held out little hope for Tidewell who was shot through the abdomen. Tyre was shot in the face, left shoulder and left arm.

Thomas Sargeant, the slain negro, shot the officers. He was killed by Tyre. The shooting occurred when the officers attempted to search the negro for whisky.

Ernest Graham and Frank Goldston, Sargeant's companions, were arrested yesterday near Russellville and were spirited away for safe keeping.

Lottie Pickford Gets License for Marriage

Los Angeles, July 22 (A.P.).—Lottie Pickford, screen actress and sister of Mary Pickford, today obtained a license to wed Russell Gillard, Hollywood undertaker.

Miss Pickford, who had been married and divorced twice, said the wedding would take place "somewhere in Los Angeles," but declined to say when.

11 Hurt as They Drop 40 Feet to Concrete

Seattle, July 22 (A.P.).—Eleven men were injured, three seriously, here today when scaffolding on which they were working cleaning the Washington Ship Canal locks collapsed, plunging them 40 feet to the concrete floor of the locks.

FIGHTS TO LIVE

CHANCELLOR MUELLER.

MUELLER'S BATTLE FOR LIFE IN DOUBT

DEBT PARLEY AFFECTED

Heidelberg, Germany, July 22 (A.P.).—All Germany is anxiously watching reports from the Academic Hospital here, where the political chief of the Reich, Chancellor Hermann Mueller, is making a fight for his life to overcome the effects of an operation of the gall bladder.

While the operation was pronounced successful and his fever has gone down as the result of relief from the infection, the gravity of the situation is not underestimated. The latest bulletins indicated he was resting relatively comfortably and there was some hope that his normally robust constitution might prove equal to the fight. His illness is likely to to have a serious effect on the political conference for acceptance of the Young plan for reparations payments. The severe task of representing Germany at this important gathering in about a fortnight now rests chiefly on the shoulders of Foreign Minister Gustav Stresemann, who is seeking to recover his own health nearby at Baden-Baden.

Attending physicians stated that no gall stones were found during the operation which made it unnecessary to remove the bladder. They limited themselves to opening the abscess to permit drainage. Whether another operation will be necessary depends on the healing.

HOOVER WILL FORCE ENFORCEMENT ISSUE

of Maryland. He is a great exponent of States' rights which is synonymous, in the view of those favoring the Wickersham plan, with State responsibility.

Wickersham Is Silent.

Mr. Wickersham has not said and is not likely to say in the near future how the decentralization plan would be applied to States like Maryland. But there is reason to believe that Mr. Hoover himself feels that if the decentralization plan should be established, a State enforcement policy set up, and if the people of Maryland were satisfied with conditions in their State without any form of police enforcement, it would be their business. The Federal Government would redouble its efforts to see that the State's quaint way of living did not develop a commercial industry that spilled over into adjoining States.

It was upon protection from the wet States that the drys originally based their demand for national prohibition, it is pointed out.

But regardless of the attitude of the governors, they are not to be permitted to throw cold water on the plan. Sooner or later, the administration believes, the organized drys will begin to build fires under the State executives, and the State organizations will do it as soon as the State consciousness is rekindled.

President Hoover may be expected to follow up the plan the first time he speaks and is not confined to some other subject.

THREE DIE, 20 HURT IN PRISON RIOTING

achs filled, gathered in the yard for the regular 10-minute smoking period which customarily ends when whistles summon them to their tasks at carpentering, weaving, tailoring, dyeing, mattress manufacturing and shoemaking.

Signal Starts Rioting.

As if at a concerted signal, the prisoners began to shout and mill about, gathering more than 1,300 strong in the lower end of the yard, yelling their defiance at the keepers in their midst, who are unarmed as a precautionary measure. The guards swung their fists and plunged into the throng to drag out the leaders. One, Ernest Bressette, was quickly knocked unconscious and badly beaten. The others made for the walls or locked themselves into the main prison building.

Then bedlam broke loose. One band of prisoners rushed into the carpenter shop. After looting it of every available weapon, smashing windows and machinery and brutally pummelling Arthur Murphy, a keeper they set fire to the structure.

Another gang wrecked the weave shop, where baled cotton is fashioned into cloth. At this point, some of the guards made a sortie from the main building under Principal Keeper Asa J. Granger and nearly all of the enraged convicts rushed into the weave shop, a wooden building. Bales of cotton were piled against the doors and windows and the guards were threatened with death if they entered.

Weave Shop Set Afire.

But after Principal Keeper Granger yelled an order for tear gas bombs, the bales were pulled aside and the prisoners streamed out into the yard, once more driving their keepers to cover in the main building or to the walls. The weave shop was then set afire.

The rioters next attacked the power house, where Arthur Dane, a civilian employe in charge of 200 of their number, had chosen to remain on the job. Dane was grabbed and some of his captors were urging that he be beaten to death when others went to his rescue and he was released with slight hurts. The dynamo which supplied light and power for the shops was quickly battered out of commission and the fires under the boilers were extinguished. The power house, built of stone and brick, would not burn, so the excited convicts returned once more to the yard.

Smoke Screen Effective.

By this time the carpenter and weave shop buildings were burning sufficiently to fill the yard with smoke and screen it from the guards scattered along the walls which bound the enclosure on three sides.

Under cover of the smoke the convicts made their break for liberty in earnest. Three or four would stand at the foot of the wall. Others would climb to their shoulders and on top of these, still others would take their place. Then a ringleader would climb the human ladder, armed with the best weapon the prison shops afforded, and attempt to get a foothold on the wall.

So blinding was the smoke that guards were sometimes unaware of the danger point until the human pyramid was complete and a head reached the top of the wall. Then guns would blaze forth, the pyramid would fall and the wounded convicts would grovel on the ground and curse amid knots of their sympathizers.

Siren Blasts Warning.

At the first sign of disorder, the prison siren had blasted its dread warning through the countryside. In the town of Dannemora, most of the able-bodied men ran for weapons and hurried to the outside of the prison. Others obtained rifles and pistols at the town hardware stores. A second line of defense was formed outside the walls.

Telephones hummed across the mountainous country. More than twenty State troppers sped to the scene on motorcycles from the barracks at Malone. Every available Customs guard and border patrolman was sent down in automobiles, and a call for help to the Plattsburg Camp of the Twenty-sixth United States Infantry brought Maj. Max W. Sullivan and 50 soldiers to the scene in speeding automobiles.

The soldiers were marshalled outside the walls, but their commander pointed out that he was powerless to lead his men into the prison yard without orders from President Hoover. These orders were not forthcoming, however and the men who might easily have stopped the riot with less bloodshed and destruction were forced to stand by as possible aid in the most extreme emergency.

Fire Companies Answer.

The telephone alarms had also brought fire companies from Dannemora, Plattsburg and Morrisonville, but to have let the firemen into the yard would have given the hundreds of belligerent prisoners their liberty to range across the countryside. The firemen rigged up their hose and played streams of water over the walls into the burning structures, but these were totally destroyed.

At about 12, enthusiasm for the riotous carnival began to diminish among the rank and file of the convicts. First a few at a time and later in large numbers they began to slip past the iron fence dividing the yard from the main building. The guards, armed with shotguns and reinforced by the State troopers, who had been let in by a rear door, accepted their surrender and as quickly as they gave up, the convicts were locked in their cells.

The defections grew in number and there was a final rush, none wishing to be "bitter-enders." When the last man went through the doors, the yard contained only the dead and wounded. These were removed, the fires extinguished and an investigation began without a moment's delay.

Inventor Claims Gasoline Tank Placing Is Infringement.

Tampa, Fla., July 22 (A.P.).—Attorneys for Fred W. Furen, inventor, St. Petersburg, today filed a damage suit for $2,000,000 royalties against the Ford Motor Co. of Detroit, charging infringement of patent rights.

The suit contends that placing the gasoline tank within the body of the car, with an inlet on the outside, used on about 1,750,000 of the later models, infringed on a basic patent issued to Furen in December, 1924, although his plan was to place the tank under the seat with entrance through the side of the automobile.

CURRENT EVENTS IN MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA

VIRGINIA CAMPAIGN GAINS IN INTEREST

LIGHT VOTE FORECAST

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
313 S. Washington St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

With just two weeks intervening before the Democratic primary at which a candidate for governor and other State and local officers will be chosen, the campaign in this city is gaining some impetus, although it is much quieter than ordinarily. This is attributed largely to the fact that several of the local candidates, who are normally Democrats, will not compete in the primary, but will oppose the party candidates in the general election in November.

Only three of the incumbents of local offices have opposition in the primary, these being Albert V. Bryan, Commonwealth's attorney, opposed by Attorney Frederick G. Duvall; William S. Snow, civil and police justice, opposed by Attorneys Aylett B. Nicol and Clyde B. Lanham, and J. Fred Birrell, representative in the House of Delegates, whose Democratic opponent is Howard Colvin.

Those who are unopposed are Charles H. Callahan, commissioner of revenue; Elliott F. Hoffman, clerk of the corporation court, and Robert H. Cox, city sergeant. Neither Commissioner Callahan nor Sergeant Cox has had opposition for many years. Clerk Hoffman was appointed to serve out the unexpired term of Nevelle S. Greenaway, who died in office, and also received an appointment for the full term of eight years, this being the first time he has come before the voters of the city. He will be opposed in the general election.

While the number of qualified voters in this city exceeds 5,000, it is not expected that more than 2,000 votes will be cast in the primary.

An old-time camp meeting will open August 1 in the new tabernacle 1 mile from the Mount Vernon station, and in the Mount Vernon district of Fairfax County. The workers to be in charge are: The Rev. Fred H. Ross, of California; the Rev. Milton Thomas, of Maryland; Miss Bertha Munro, of Massachusetts; the Rev. H. H. Hoyt and the Rev. J. C. Duggar, of Virginia.

The song leader and soloist will be Alvin Young, of New York, assisted by J. I. Jones, of Washington. Mrs. H. H. Hoyt and Miss Virginia Cabel will be at the piano.

Deeds of conveyance for the following pieces of property were placed on record yesterday in the office of the clerk of the Corporation Court: James A. Tomlin and wife to Abe L. Cohen, house and lot on the west side of Henry between King and Prince streets; Richard L. Ruffner to P. C. Duborg, lot 16, block 16, section 2, Rosemont; Louis Stein and others, trustees, to D. E. Bayliss, lot on the north side of Cameron between Pitt and St. Asaph streets; Edward L. Crumbaugh and wife to R. B. Washington, house and lot at 712 north Washington street.

Liberty Rebekah Lodge of Odd Fellows will hold a meeting tonight at Odd Fellows' Temple to arrange the excursion on July 30 to Marshall Hall. An entertainment will be given by the program committee.

Levi Allen, living at 415 Prince street, reported at police headquarters that his son, Julian Allen, was bitten on the leg by a dog Sunday afternoon while watching a ball game at Dreadnaught Park. The boy was treated by Dr. T. Marshall Jones. The dog is alleged to belong to Merrill Lynch, of 1412 King street.

Mrs. Charles A. S. Sinclair, regent of Mount Vernon Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, has announced the following committee appointments for the State convention of Virginia D. A. R. to be held in Alexandria October 28 to 30: Mrs. T. W. Robinson, Mrs. William J. Boothe and Mrs. D. Mauchlin Niven, program; Mrs. Charles Ellett Cabell, Mrs. Emmett C. Dunn, Mrs. Charles T. Nicholson and Mrs. Henry Starr Watties, hospitality; Mrs. John T. Ashton, transportation.

Funeral services for Mrs. Rhoda M. Thorpe, who died Sunday at her home in Cottage Park, will be held from Grace Episcopal Church, this city, at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon, conducted by the Rev. Edgar Carpenter, rector, and interment will be in Bethel Cemetery. The funeral procession will leave the residence at 2 o'clock.

Mrs. Thorpe was a member of Grace Episcopal Church, of Jessica Callahan Chapter, Order of Eastern Star; Potomac Social Club, Rebekah Lodge of Odd Fellows, No. 16, and Patriotic Order of Americans, Camp No. 8.

Young Alderman To Wed Saturday

Miss Cuculla to Become Bride of Virginia Educator's Son.

Lynchburg, Va., July 22.—Announcement of the engagement of Miss Anne Polk Cucullu, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Cucullu, of Lynchburg, to Edwin Anderson Alderman, jr., of New York City, was announced to day.

Alderman is the son of the president of the University of Virginia and is at present associated with Harcourt, Brace & Co., publishers. He is a graduate of the University of Virginia. Miss Cucullu is an alumna of Hollins College.

The wedding has been set for next Saturday afternoon at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Lynchburg.

100 Ministers Attend West Virginia Parley

Special to The Washington Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., July 22.—Upward of a hundred ministers from all over the State assembled tonight at Jacksons Mill for the third annual State Ministers Conference, which will continue until Friday. William H. Kendrick, head of the State 4-H Clubs, and Fred Brooks, of French Creek, Federal entomologist, were principal speakers tonight.

Bishop Herbert Welch, of the Pittsburgh area of the Methodist Episcopal Church will be a featured speaker Thursday. Gov. William G. Conley and several college presidents are on the program.

Danville Man to Run On Independent Ticket

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., July 22.—James R. Bell, former police chief and a candidate for the post of city constable, has withdrawn from the primary of next August and will run in November as an independent.

In a letter to H. A. Wiseman, chairman of the local committee, Bell complains of "confusion" as to who may vote in the primary and says he has determined to offer himself to the people as a whole, without party nomination. His action means that R. M. Foster, the incumbent, will be the nominee and that Danville voters will pass only on the question of governor.

Seven in Stamp Fraud Face Charleston Trial

New York, July 22 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—United States Commissioner Cotter today ordered the removal to Charleston, S. C., of H. Chitraro, L. A. Beebe, C. J. Gregory, C. C. Kelton, Edgar Nelton, Frank Marquis and Sam Boyaner, under indictments charging conspiracy to wash and sell postage stamps.

The defendants were indicted in Charleston in May.

Patrick J. Creegan Buried.

Cumberland, Md., July 22 (Special).—Patrick Joseph Creegan, 68, former police officer, died at his home here after a long illness. He moved to Cumberland from Hoffman, Md., ten years ago. He was a member of St. Patrick's Church, the Holy Name Society and the Ancient Order of Hibernians. Besides his wife, he is survived by three sons and four daughters. His funeral was held from St. Patrick's Church this morning.

ARLINGTON SPEEDS WORK ON UTILITIES

Companies Are Urged to Prevent Delays on Road Widening.

ASK PRECINCT DIVISION

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST,
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Meeting with representatives from the Postal Telegraph Co., Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. and Rosslyn Gas Co. at his office yesterday, County Engineer C. L. Kinnier outlined the plans for widening and resurfacing Wilson Boulevard from the Military road to Clarendon.

With extensive plans made by the telephone company to take care of its increased service at the Clarendon exchange and with the gas company arranging for extension and improvements to its service, Engineer Kinnier pointed out the need to have all the underground work completed as soon as possible to avoid delay in improving the boulevard.

Kinnier said bids for the work would be opened by the board of supervisors next Tuesday and that he expected to have the work begun not later than August 15 as the county had the money ready for the improvements.

Yesterday afternoon County Engineer Thomas N. De Lashmutt, with representatives of the Postal Telegraph and telephone companies made a survey of the road in preparation for the removal of their poles.

Judge Howard W. Smith, in Circuit Court of Arlington County tomorrow morning will hold a public hearing on the petition asking that the Clarendon voting precinct be divided.

The petition, as filed by Edgar W. Pumphrey, points out that owing to the large number of voters now registered in the Clarendon precinct many were unable to cast their votes at the last general election and for that reason the petition asking a division was filed.

Judge Smith also will be asked to appoint commissioners in the condemnation proceedings now pending as filed by the State Highway Department through Commonwealth's Attorney William C. Gloth to acquire needed rights of way along the Glebe road to continue the widening of that road.

John Simpson, 25, colored, of Washington, arrested by the Washington authorities Saturday night as a suspect in the shooting of a policeman of the town of Potomac, Arlington County, a year ago, was questioned by Town Sergeant A. F. Driscoll and released yesterday.

The man wanted, the Potomac police say, is named John Simmons and he is sought on a charge of firing on Officer George Embrey with a shot gun in the night of March 18, 1928.

Arrested Saturday night by Policeman Raymond Crack, Wilford Devenger, wanted by the county police since September, 1928, on a charge of transporting liquor, was held for the action of the grand jury by Police Judge Harry R. Thomas.

Thomas Jones and William Proctor, both colored, were also held for the grand jury on a charge of transporting as was Lurah Murray, colored, charged with possession of a still.

E. C. Johnson, W. Benton and William Pickett were each fined $16.25 on a charge of being under the influence of liquor. Albert Siegel forfeited $15 on a charge of illegal parking.

Gov. Byrd has apointed Mrs. Florence E. Cannon, president of the Arlington Citizens' Association; Mrs. Claude S. Semones, first vice president of the Arlington County Civic Federation; Mrs. Julian B. Simpson, president of the Organized Women Voters of Arlington County, and Mrs. J. H. Walton, State director of the League of Women Voters, as delegates from Arlington County to the Institute of Public Affairs which meets in Charlottesville August 4 to 17.

With the need for more room to conduct the work of his office, County Treasurer E. Wade Ball will take over the room which, since the courthouse was erected in 1898, has been used by the county board of supervisors and the police court. The supervisors and police court will use a room formerly occupied by County Clerk William H. Duncan, who has moved into the new addition to the courthouse.

The executive committee of the Arlington County Busines and Professional Woman's Club, at a meeting yesterday in the office of Mrs. Salada Ruppert at the courthouse, completed plans for the picnic meeting to be held tomorrow evening at Glen Echo.

Mrs. Albert Cohen, president, requests all members to attend.

Brothers Paroled As Killers of Boy

Lads Accused of Drowning Raymond Colley, 6, After Quarrel.

Welch, W. Va., July 22 (A.P.).—Charged with slaying a 9-year-old playmate, two brothers, Hobart and Cornell Hamilton, aged 9 and 10 years, respectively, were paroled to the custody of their parents by Judge James A. Strother, sitting as a juvenile judge here today. Judge Strother previously had sentenced the boys to an indefinite term in the State reform school. That sentence was suspended to permit the parole, which provided that the brothers must obey their parents, stay home at night, and keep out of mischief.

The boys were indicted for drowning Raymond Colley in Dry Fork River following a quarrel. The youngsters had faced trial on charges of murder until Judge Strother heard the case as a juvenile judge. As a consequence, the boys were dealt with as incorrectibles rather than as killers.

Manager's Pay Raised By Lynchburg Council

Lynchburg, Va., July 22.—The city council this afternoon increased the salary of R. W. B. Hart, City Manager, from $7,000 to $8,400. The council also gave the manager a vote of confidence.

Births and Deaths Even.

Lynchburg, Va., July 22.—Five births and five deaths were reported last week to the bureau of health here. There were four white and one negro births and three white and two negro deaths.

Potash and Matches Set Man's Coat Afire

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., July 22.—Chlorate of potash and safety matches of the usual variety are dangerous pocket mates, A. A. Booth, secretary of the chamber of commerce, learned yesterday. When he found his coat on fire he ripped it off, but the flames had ruined the garment. In one pocket were some tablets of chlorate of potash used frequently by public speakers for toning up the throat, also a folding box of matches.

A chemist said that when the two come in contact a chemical reaction results.

JAIL TERM BEGUN BY EDWIN CROUCH

GIVES UP TO SHERIFF

Edwin C. Crouch, of 909 Fourteenth street southeast, former member of the special grand jury of the District of Columbia, has begun serving his long-delayed sentence of 30 days in the Fairfax County, Va., jail for driving an automobile while intoxicated. He gave himself up to Sheriff E. P. Kirby.

Crouch was arrested with W. H. Ontrich, also a member of the grand jury, on December 6 while returning from a trip of inspection to the Occoquan Workhouse. The two were taken near Accotink. Crouch was charged with driving while intoxicated and transporting liquor. Ontrich was booked for intoxication. Both men immediately resigned from the District grand jury.

A special grand jury indicted Crouch on January 21 and on February 8 he was convicted in Fairfax County Circuit Court and sentenced to serve 30 days in jail on each charge and to pay fines of $50 and $100 on the respective charges of driving while drunk and of transporting. The jail sentence was suspended. Ontrich was fined $14 previously by a justice of the peace.

Obliging Police Dress Chickens for Owners

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., July 22.—Danville police who are coping with an unusual wave of chicken stealing, are now dressing the chickens that are found maimed or dead, putting them on ice, and giving them to those who can show beyond a reasonable doubt that their henneries have been invaded.

Police Lieut. Haraway surprised a negro carrying a sack over his shoulder at night. The negro dropped the sack and disappeared into the night. The chickens were found smothered or dead, so they were taken to jail and there dressed and sent to cold storage. Identification of a dead chicken being impossible, the police have decided to fall back to the theory of approximate identification.

CITIZEN SOLDIERS FACING BUSY WEEK

Maj. Gen. Bridges Reviews Campers at Fort Washington.

PLAN AN AERIAL DISPLAY

An eventful week in the 1929 C. M. T. C. camp was ushered in at Fort Washington yesterday by the visit of Maj. Gen. Charles H. Bridges, adjutant general of the Army, who inspected the camp and reviewed the battalion of Pennsylvania boys in the late afternoon. The general was accompanied by Capt. Kenneth Bush.

Led by the camp band, the battalion of 8,030 Keystone boys, in company formation, with the machine gun company making its first appearance with full equipment, made an impressive array before the reviewing stand on the spacious parade ground.

Among the distinguished visitors on hand for the review by the adjutant general were Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Gans, of Washington. Mr. Gans has taken an active interest in the camp and paid a glowing tribute to the fine appearance of the Pennsylvania boys and the soldierly precision of their parade maneuvers.

This morning the boys will witness a display by a squadron of airplanes frmo Bolling Field, which has been arranged by Maj. Alexander M. Patch, Twelfth Infantry, camp commander. The exhibition will take place at 10:30 o'clock.

At 1:45 p. m. the guns of the fort will roar out another salute of thirteen guns to Maj. Gen. Fred W. Fladen, the commanding general of the Third Corps Area, who will arrive at that time with his staff for an inspection of the camp and a review of the camp battalion.

Another parade will take place at 5 o'clock when the boys will assemble for the day's address on "Citizenship," by Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky.

HIGH SPEED BLAMED IN FATAL CAR CRASH

Coroner's Jury Finds Auto Wreck That Killed Two Caused by Racing.

HIT POLE NEAR LAUREL

An inquest into the death of two Washington men early yesterday morning on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard, near Laurel, Md., held yesterday afternoon at Laurel found that the accident was unavoidable in view of the speed with which the car was traveling when it skidded, overturned, and struck a telegraph pole.

Robert Bugg, 25 years old, formerly of 1726 Seventeenth street northwest and of Memphis, Tenn., was instantly killed in the wreck and John Wilson, 28 years old, of the same address, suffered a skull fracture and two broken legs, dying several hours later in the Casualty Hospital, where he was brought by Walter Ferrara, bus driver. A German police dog suffered a broken leg.

The men were found pinned beneath the wreckage by Frank and Flavey Willie, garage men, of Laurel, a short while after the car went off the slippery road, about 2:30 o'clock yesterday morning.

Police Sergt. C. E. Duckworth, who investigated, said that the men obviously were traveling at high speed.

Another wrecked auto was found abandoned off the highway near the scene of the first accident later yesterday morning by Emory Loveless, of Laurel. The car had been driven only 25 miles.

Although the license tags were torn off, police learned by a card attached to the steering wheel that it was the property of the Fort Strong Motor Service, Lee Highway, opposite Lyon Village, Va., and that it had been stolen earlier in the morning.

Richard J. Burasque, the manager, said that he was called to his garage early yesterday when a blaze was discovered. One of the cars had been set on fire and another, which was identified as the wrecked auto, had been stolen. An old car, the owner of which has been traced to Philadelphia, was found abandoned in front of the garage.

Police were investigating, but at an early hour last night they had not learned the identity of the driver of the wrecked auto or whether he had been injured.

TWO LOSE LIVES WHEN AUTOMOBILE OVERTURNS

Overturning early yesterday on the Baltimore Boulevard near Laurel, Md., this machine brought a speedy death to Robert Bugg, of 1726 Sevent eenth street northwest, and injuries to John Wilson, of the same address, wh ich proved fatal several hours later.

WIVES TO ATTEND MEDICAL MEETING

Committee Is Planning Special Features for Them.

UNIVERSITY TO BE HOST

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., July 22.—Mrs. Henry B. Mulholland has been appointed chairman of a committee of doctors' wives who will assist in the entertainment of visitors when the Medical Society of Virginia meets at the University of Virginia in October in connection with the dedication of the new $1,400,000 building for the department of medicine.

Wives of doctors from the city and county who are on the committee headed by Mrs. Mulholland are Mrs. H. L. Baptist, of Ivy; Mrs. R. L. Page, of Batesville; Mrs. M. L. Rea and Mrs. W. D. Macon, of Charlottesville, and Mrs. James C. Flippin, Mrs. John H. Neff, Mrs. Edwin P. Lehman, Mrs. Frank B. Stafford, Mrs. Allen F. Voshell and Mrs. Fletcher D. Woodward, of the university.

The Medical Society of Virginia meets in Charlottesville October 22, 23 and 24. This will be the first time in 23 years that this body has had its annual fall convention in this city.

The program for the dedication of the new medical school building is still in the tentative stage. Several medical men of national reputation have been invited to participate, but the committee in charge is not ready to announce the list of acceptances.

Doctors from all over Virginia have been invited to bring their wives with them to the meeting this year, for Mrs. Mulholland and her committee are arranging features for the entertainment of the women while their husbands are attending the sessions of the medical society.

DIRECTORS CHOOSE PONY SHOW OFFICERS

Robert H. R. Blickle Heads Warrenton Organization During Coming Year.

HUNTER TRIALS PLANNED

Special to The Washington ost.

Warrenton, Va., July 22.—At the annual meeting of the directors of the Warrenton Pony Show Saturday afternoon the following were elected officers for the ensuing year:

Robert H. R. Blickle, president; Betty Nesbit and Robert E. Ferneyhough, vice president; Mildred F. Gaines, secretary, and Edith C. Nesbit, treasurer.

The board of directors is composed of the following: North Fletcher, Emily North King, James Hibbard, Helen Horner, William Gulick and Mae Ferneyhough. It was decided at the meeting to hold hunter trials this fall, some time after the Warrenton Horse Show, the exact date to be determined later.

Robert Blickle was chosen as master of the horses for the junior hunt and Henry Ferneyhough master for the ponies of the junior hunt. Reports from the secretary showed the finances of the show and the junior hunt to be in good shape.

North Fletcher, the retiring president, was the choice of those present to succeed himself as president of the show, but refused to accept the nomination and upon his insistence his name was withdrawn.

Man, 70, to Wed Girl, 24.

Staunton, Va., July 22.—Forty-six years' difference in the ages is no hindrance to a couple smitten by the darts of Dan Cupid. Yesterday Jackson Thomas, 70, of Waynesboro, secured a marriage license to wed Mary Coles, 24. The parties are colored.

Building Permits Decline in Virginia

June Record in Eight Cities Shows Slump Over Previous Months.

Richmond, Va., July 22 (A.P.).—June's record of plans filed and building permits issued in Virginia's eight largest cities did not keep pace with the five months' records preceding, which gave the cities involved an increase of $83,127 for the six months ended June 30 over the same period last year.

According to the monthly building report issued by S. W. Straus & Co., the June, 1929, record was $1,314,397, against $2,101,020 for June, 1928, while for the six-month periods, 1929 leads with $11,456,003 over $11,314,397 for 1928.

The June, 1929, records for the eight cities follow: Richmond, $554,989; Norfolk, $336,855; Roanoke, $197,727; Danville, $30,350; Lynchburg, $45,146; Newport News (15 per cent underestimate), $74,848; Petersburg, $30,492, and Portsmouth, $43,990. Richmond and Newport News showed gains for the month of June and the first six months of the year.

Martinsburg Resident Dies When Hit by Auto

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 22.—Harry Simpson, 63, carpenter, was fatally injured Sunday night when he stepped from between two automobiles into the path of another automobile. His skull was fractured.

Harry Oyerly, driver of the car which hit him, was not held. Simpson was a native of Washington and for several years lived in Shepherdstown, W. Va.

Blow by Baseball Bat Proves Fatal to Man

Elkton, Md., July 22.—Calvin Cox, 34 years old, died early this morning in Union Hospital here, and Lambert Hines, 25, is in Cecil County jail as the result of an argument late yesterday at White Crystal Beach, when Hines is said to have hit Cox over the head with a baseball bat.

His skull was fractured. Hines was arrested by Sheriff D. Clinton Logan. Witnesses to the affair were Mrs. Mildred Cox, wife of the dead man, and Frank Reed. The party, all of whom live near Earlville, Md., were spending the day at the beach. Hines will be given a hearing before Magistrate R. L. Alderson this week.

Cumberland Man Dies.

On the corner of an important thoroughfare, in the Piazza Regalmici in Palermo, is the beauty salon of André Fabbri, known to his patrons as André. This curious seal ornaments his shop front.

says ANDRÉ of Palermo

The leading beauty specialist of southern Italy

SINCE he was 13 years old, André Fabbri has been making beauty products. At that time he used to assist his father, in Milan—when he was not studying painting and drawing. Today, André has renounced the arts. He devotes himself entirely to the profession of beauty culture, with his wife's assistance.

He studied chemistry in Germany, Austria and Russia. As a young man he learned the purpose and substance of cosmetics in Paris. And, today, he holds many International Prizes and Gold Medals for beauty competitions. His wife is his close coworker in the salon. And they both insist on the use of Palmolive Soap "to keep skin supple and toned up, to free it of the day's accumulated dust and make-up."

So do all the experts

In Paris, in London, in Madrid, in New York, one hears the same advice. The leading beauty specialists have tried out many methods of skin cleansing and they have decided that "the simplest method is by far the best—that is, the consistent use of Palmolive Soap and water."

In America there are more than 16,000 experts who subscribe to this theory. And there are millions who use Palmolive for the bath as well, since it costs no more than ordinary soap.

Do you use Palmolive? If not, you'll want to try it tonight, for face and bath. And regularly every morning and night thereafter. Here is the way to keep your face smooth, fresh, ready for make-up: massage a smooth lather of Palmolive into the skin for two minutes. Rinse with warm water, then with cold. That's the world's most popular beauty treatment!

Madame Cecile André, wife of the head of Maison André, assists her husband in all his important salon work. She joins him in advocating daily use of Palmolive Soap.

A framed certificate of proficiency hangs on the wall of the Maison André, only one of many awards received by André, of Palermo. His salon is extremely foreign in atmosphere, reflecting the Sicilian surroundings.

"Personally I am always anxious unless I know that a client is following my advice and using Palmolive Soap at home. I use no other in my salon, because I have found that this is the one soap that I can rely on to cleanse the skin thoroughly and at the same time keep it supple and toned up."

Cécile André
PALERMO

World-wide recommendation gives Palmolive the greatest professional endorsement any product ever had. In America alone 16,342 experts advise this beauty soap.

The rounded, tapered corners of this new sanitary pad assure complete concealment... always GOOD-GROOMING is never so difficult—and ill-grooming never so unforgivable—as in summer. What a relief, then, is this new sanitary protection that can never embarrass!

Kotex is non-detectable, even under the light, filmy clothes of summer. Corners are rounded and tapered for perfect fit. There is no awkward bulk. Kotex brings a sense of complete security and peace of mind.

Other features make Kotex absolutely indispensable in summer. Kotex is light, cool, comfortable. It is filled with the wonderful absorbent Cellucotton wadding, in air-cooled layers. This is the same filler selected by surgeons in 85% of the country's leading hospitals. It actually absorbs 16 times its own weight in moisture! Five times more than cotton and cotton fabrics can absorb. This is the reason for the remarkable protection you get with Kotex, without weight or bulk.

Kotex deodorizes

Kotex deodorizes, too—so much more important in summer. And disposes instantly, like tissue. The Cellucotton layers can easily be adjusted to suit individual requirements.

Kotex is soft . . .

2—Safe, secure . . . keeps your mind at ease.

3—Kotex filler is far lighter and cooler than cotton, yet absorbs 5 times as much.

4—In hospitals . . . Kotex is the identical material used practically exclusively by surgeons in 85% of the country's leading hospitals.

RENEWED PEACE HOPES.

Developments at the State Department yesterday brought renewed hope of averting the crisis in the Far East before war descends upon China and Russia in Manchuria. The danger period is by no means past, but officials and diplomats are breathing a little easier and tension is relaxed.

Mr. Paul Claudel, the French Ambassador, came to inform Secretary Stimson of the purport of Soviet Russia's pledge to abide by the Kellogg pact unless China proved the aggressor. Dr. C. C. Wu, the Chinese Minister, brought assurance from his government that China would abide by the pact unless Soviet Russia proved the aggressor. Mr. Katsuji Debuchi, the Japanese Ambassador, conveyed to Mr. Stimson a message from his government stating that both China and Russia had assured Japan that the pact would be observed unless violated by the other power.

It has been clear all along that neither China nor Russia want to engage in war. The Chinese Nationalists have no desire to see their territory invaded and are naturally anxious and willing to have pacific methods applied to the controversy. Soviet Russia is not in a position to defend its position without violating the communist theories against war, and is probably in no position to wage a campaign in Manchuria anyway. The Chinese were fully aware of Russia's impotence before they expelled communist agitators, took control of the Chinese-Eastern Railway and refused to be impressed by the Soviet ultimatum.

China and Russia have now communicated officially to the United States the fact, previously reported by cable, that they will abide by the Kellogg pact if the other power does not prove the aggressor. That, in itself, may not be particularly significant under present circumstances but there are other developments of an encouraging character.

Secretary Stimson, for example, corrected reports that the United States had suggested arbitration of the controversy or that the United States was offering to assume leadership in persuading other powers to intervene. Any such step on the part of America at this time would subject America to the charge of intruding prematurely into matters which do not concern it and would make foreign statesmen believe that the Kellogg peace pact had gone to the heads of officials of the American State Department. Nothing is more important in the present delicate situation than to avoid blundering into a policy which would saddle the United States with burdens and responsibilities for years to come, and force America into the position of umpire in an international dispute thousands of miles from American shores.

American cooperation with the powers in suggesting to China and Russia that they settle the controversy without resort to war is a natural and commendable move, in line with time-honored policies of the past. Both China and Russia have reacted favorably to such suggestions, as they were expected to do. If Soviet Russia can be persuaded to withdraw her massed troops from the border the chance of averting war will be greatly enhanced and meanwhile the best chance of preserving peace will be to avoid any uncalled for interference from the outside.

Certainly, the United States is not required to make any further move at this time. The Chinese and Russians have an unlimited field open to them for adjusting the controversy. The two nations can establish direct contacts with each other and the Chinese government has already sought to bring this about. There may be methods of mediation and conciliation agreeable to both which will develop in due time.

Japan has a far greater interest in the controversy than the United States and unsolicited intrusion by America would be keenly resented in Japan, just as the United States would resent unsolicited intrusion by Japan in a dispute on the American continent. Peace leadership in Manchuria falls logically to the Japanese rather than to distant powers, out of touch with conditions.

America will face a thankless task if she attempts to meddle in the controversy. The vision of American statesmanship, marching side by side with communist propaganda to discuss with China whether bolshevik agitators should or should not be reinstated in the Chinese Eastern Railway is one of the absurd possibilities which might result from premature meddling by Uncle Sam.

FRENCH RATIFICATION.

When the French Chamber of Deputies, early Sunday morning, ratified the Mellon-Berenger debt agreement it took a step that was needed to preserve France economically and it brought to a happy conclusion a dispute that has threatened, time and again, to disrupt amicable relationships between the United States and France. Ratification was accomplished by the narrow margin of eight votes, but the margin of victory is of no importance. The matter has yet to be acted upon by the French Senate, but the government has so large a majority in the upper chamber that ratification therein is assured. The French debt controversy is definitely concluded.

Premier Poincare proved his statesmanship and his vision in leading the fight for ratification to a successful conclusion. He stood foursquare against the critics and in a magnificent 37-hour speech he proved that any course other than ratification without reservation would be fatal to France. He showed that the inclusion of reservations would be unsatisfactory to France's creditors and he finally drove home the point that France could not expect to ask Germany to bind herself to the reparations payments unless she evidenced a willingness to pay her own debts. Ratification of the agreement may be looked upon as a personal victory for Poincare and the lieutenant who supported him so ably, Foreign Minister Briand.

The chamber followed ratification of the agreement by adopting a resolution calling for the creation of a special account in the treasury for the impounding of all reparation collections to be used for payment of the debt. The resolution was offered in the nature of a reservation and it met with the approval of the government. It, however, does not concern the United States. It makes no difference to this Government what machinery France sets up for the collection and payment of her debts, and the chamber probably has taken a wise step in letting the French people know that the reparation receipts will be used for the settlement of the debts. From the international standpoint the important consideration is that France, like a good business man, has honored her obligations, a fact that will insure the stability of her credit. Incidentally, inasmuch as the $400,000,000 postarmistice war surplus stock debt, which would have fallen due on August 1, is included in the Mellon-Berenger total, ratification of the agreement by France will provide immediate relief for the French treasury, Congress having consented to permit the merger in advance of American ratification.

MEDICINAL LIQUOR.

Senator Elmer Thomas fears that the thought of Uncle Sam manufacturing choice Bourbon and rye whisky to replenish the medicinal supply will whet the appetite of bootleg patrons. So he has announced that he will raise his voice in protest against the distilling plans of the Prohibition Bureau. Unless the scheme is abandoned he threatens a congressional investigation.

In the first place, Senator Thomas promises to attempt to override the judgment of Commissioner Doran, who has found it necessary to add to the medicinal supply. He contends that there is no need for distilling, yet the Government has on hand only about 8,000,000 gallons, sufficient to meet normal requirements for five years. It is necessary for liquor to age four years before it is fit for medicinal purposes.

In the second place, Senator Thomas' statement is tantamount to accusing the Government of embarking on a bootlegging enterprise. "The manufacture of more medicinal liquor," he said, "is to recognize the need of whisky for the purpose of appeasing the appetite." He is opposed to the use of medicinal liquor and will not consent to its legal manufacture without a fight. He thus overrides the judgment of the country's physicians, a majority of whom prescribe liquor for certain ailments.

The position taken by the Oklahoma senator is typical of that of the extreme drys. They are opposed to liquor for any purpose, beneficial or otherwise. Under the Willis-Campbell act, prohibitional officials are required to maintain a stock of medicinal liquor sufficient to supply the country's needs. It is inconceivable that Commissioner Doran, who is charged with enforcement of prohibition, would make arrangements for distilling 2,000,000 gallons of liquor if it were not necessary under the law. Recent thefts and substitutions of the heavily-guarded Government stores emphasize the necessity of keeping on hand only sufficient whisky to supply actual requirements.

It would hardly be appropriate, however, for the Government, which is making law enforcement a major issue, to disregard the mandate of Congress to keep an adequate stock of medicinal liquor on hand. When the drys attack the manufacture of liquor for this purpose they are striking at a part of the prohibition structure and thereby defeating their own purposes.

AN ENGLISH INVASION.

At a time when the Senate finance committee is contemplating reduction or removal of the tariff against automobiles comes the announcement that the American market is to be invaded by the "English Ford," known as the Baby Austin. The question of a tariff is not involved, however, because the British car will be manufactured in this country. Reports say that a $1,000,000 factory will be built at Butler, Pa., with a capacity of 50,000 cars per year. It appears that the car will be manufactured cheaper here than in England and that it will be sold for less than any of the standard American makes.

The reception of the Austin Seven by the American public will be most interesting. The American automobile industry has just completed conquering the world. Ninety per cent of all the automobiles in operation at present were manufactured in this country. Exports are growing rapidly and American cars are reported to be more popular than the home product in many foreign countries. In the first six months of this year American factories built 3,223,090 automobiles, an increase of 46 per cent over the same period in 1928. In the face of such a record can the English car furnish serious competition?

It is significant that the British company is establishing a branch plant in the United States where labor costs are high while England has millions of unemployed. The fact suggests that the company has been lured by the American market rather than costs of labor. Despite a remarkable increase in American automobile exports this year, it is estimated that all but 18 per cent of the total production will be sold within the States. The success of the American industry has been generally attributed to mass production, but mass production has been possible only because of the unlimited market this country affords.

A foreign company now proposes to take advantage of that market. The experiment is calculated to prove to what extent foreign manufacturers have been hampered by unsatisfactory outlets for their products. If the venture is successful it may tempt other foreign concerns to invade the American market. There is opportunity to learn much about the future of the automobile industry, both American and foreign, from the introduction of the Austin Seven on American soil.

SPEEDY CROSSINGS

From the New York Times.

The Bremen's maiden voyage wrote a dramatic chapter in man's perennial struggle against time and distance. In that struggle man has made wonderful strides, considering that Lindbergh spanned in 33 hours a distance Columbus needed two months and eight days to cross.

In that intervening period of 435 years the Atlantic has, metaphorically, considerably shrunk. Great modern steamships now regularly ferry between Europe and America in little more than five days. Yet it has taken centuries of arduous, steady striving. Since men have been crossing the Atlantic the means and speed of transportation have enormously varied.

The crossings were, of course, by sail until scarcely a century ago. When the Mayflower in 1620 brought the Pilgrim Fathers to the New England Coast the voyage consumed 63 days, little less than it had taken the three caravels of Columbus 128 years before.

Sails were slow, but gallant clipper ships often made faster passages than the best early steamers' records, the Red Jacket once crossing from Liverpool to New York in 13 days 11 hours and 25 minutes, and the Dreadnaught bettering that time by three hours. The first steamer to cross the Atlantic was the American-built Savannah, which was only 100 feet long and of only 350 tons displacement. She was a paddle-wheel boat, but her engines were purely auxiliary; when the sea was too rough for steaming her sails went up and the paddle-wheels were taken in on deck. In 1819—110 years ago—she crossed from Savannah to Liverpool in 25 days.

To the little steamship Sirius, however, belongs the real honor of inaugurating the great Atlantic ferry service of today. She was the first "liner." Leaving Queenstown in 1838, she reached New York 18½ days later, maintaining an average speed of 8½ miles an hour, steamship time.

The triumph of the Sirius did not last long, for a few hours later the Great Western turned up, having made the voyage from Bristol in 13½ days, which time she subsequently lowered to 12½ days. By 1864, under Cunard, the time was cut to less than 9 days, and in 1872 the Adriatic, of the White Star Line, cut the time to 7 days 23 hours and 17 minutes, setting a record for several years.

The Oregon, of the Guion Line, in 1884 made the Queenstown-New York run in 6 days 9 hours and 43 minutes. Five years later the City of Paris, of the Inman Line, made the same run in less than six days, a record broken two years later by the White Star liner Teutonic.

This rivalry culminated in the building by the Cunards of the Mauretania and the ill-fated Lusitania, by which the average passage was further reduced. In 1910 the Mauretania made a run between New York and Queenstown in 4 days 10 hours and 41 minutes—the first of a long series of records established by this vessel.

The war brought a lull in the race for steamship speed honors across the Atlantic and the airplane has left the steamship far behind in swift crossings. Lieut. Brown and the late Capt. Alcock set a precedent in 1919 by flying from Newfoundland to Ireland, 1,960 miles, in 16 hours and 12 minutes; and in May, 1927, Col. Lindbergh made his epochal flight from New York to Paris in 33½ hours. Zeppelins, too, have cut down the time.

But steamers have not given up fighting for laurels among themselves. The Mauretania created three new records in as many months last year, and early this year again proved her queenship of the Atlantic by lowering her own New York-Plymouth time. The Bremen is but one of several being built by great lines with the intention of carrying off the blue pennant. And this rivalry holds promise of a further reduction in the time for Atlantic crossings by steamships.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

THINGS INESCAPABLE.

Oh, travel this world by which roadway you choose,
And follow your bent and your will,
The dearest of treasures some day you will lose
At the foot or the crest of the hill.
On land, or on sea, and wherever you stray
You will still need your faith for the sorrowful day.

Go at this life in what manner you will,
In market, profession, or trades,
The need for your courage will follow you still,
There are cares you can never evade.
Be toiler or master, but down through the years
You will still need your faith when disaster appears.

You can never escape from the burdens of men,
You can never escape from their pain,
Though you win some delight you will lose it again
You must give up whatever you gain.
And whether you travel the high road or low,
The hurts and the aches of this life you shall know.

You may gather up riches and battle for fame
In triumph your struggle may end,
But you'll learn that for all men is life much the same,
You will still have the need of a friend.
For trouble will come, as you wander about
And you'll still need your faith in the darkness of doubt.

The Dirty Make the Dirt, But Its Removal Is the Job of Those Who Control the Soap.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

"ASK the man who owns one" is a good slogan. The other fellow's experience is the best teacher.

Some weeks ago two conventions assembled in South Carolina. Former doughboys met in one town and negro Elks in another.

When the doughboys had gone their way, the local paper scolded them for opening containers of moonshine whisky on the college campus, drinking within sight of the court house in the broad light of day and wrecking the furniture of their hotel.

When the negro Elks had gone the local paper complimented them for their dignified and orderly conduct, free from any suggestion of drunkenness.

Why the difference? Isn't the answer obvious?

The white men knew the lid was off. They knew they could tear up the town without fear of arrest. And the negroes knew they would be snatched off the street and lodged in jail if they showed the least symptom of rowdyism.

And there, most noble seigniors, you have the explanation of man's meanness since the beginning of time—the reasonable hope of getting away with it.

The lash is the handmaiden of virtue and men walk in paths of righteousness to save their skins.

Honor for honor's sake and the obligation of nobility may govern the conduct of those who have class pride and a family tradition to maintain, but the ordinary man behaves himself because he fears something or runs amuck because he has nothing to fear.

England has less crime than the United States because she catches and punishes offenders quickly.

Canada has less crime per capita than the United States because her judgment of criminals is just and certain.

Wisconsin has less crime per capita than any other State in the Union because offenders are caught, tried and sent to the penitentiary before the sun sets on their crime.

It is a truism: Where punishment is most certain, crime is most rare.

Why, then, is lax administration of justice permitted to encourage crime in the United States outside of Wisconsin?

Who profits by the law's delays? Lawyers.

Who is responsible for the ways of jurisprudence? Lawyers.

And who makes the laws? Lawyers.

Crime is profitable to more than the criminal.

The United States could minimize crime by making justice quick and certain.

The necessary reform of jurisprudence could be effected by the lawyers.

If the lawyers will not act, the President can exercise his great power and within a year make the United States as respectable as other English-speaking countries.

Those who have power to abolish an evil must bear the responsibility if the evil continues.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

A Practical Cotton Picker Would Help the Producer, but First a New Cotton Variety Would Have to Be Produced.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Renewed interest has been aroused in trying to encourage inventors to work toward a practical cotton picker that would help the labor situation in the South. Why does not the Farm Board set aside a sum of money for research along this line?

Between the cotton experts who hold that no machine can be used in a cotton field for picking cotton that does not destroy more blossoms than the ripe cotton that it harvests, and those who hold that the situation is hopeless, since labor is so high and so uncertain and that cotton growing in the South should be abolished, we have the middle ground of trying to grow a cotton plant that would ripen all at once. Burbank did wonders with developing plants to suit his will. If the Department of Agriculture experiments long enough, perhaps a variety could be produced that would ripen early and all at once, and some of the electric devices now suggested might be put to practical use.

The Department of Agriculture's cotton bureau experts say that the electric suction machines are commercially worthless. Of course, any one that knows anything about cotton knows that it can not be harvested like wheat—all at one cutting or gathering. After infinite pains are taken to coax the tender plants in rich soil, constantly renewed with expensive fertilizers, in a climate free from frost from March till November or December, no farmer is going to risk a suction electric machine that takes the few ripe bolls on the plant and in doing it, with the same force, destroys the buds, blossoms and immature cotton bolls.

There has been so much pernicious propaganda put out that inventors not familiar with the cotton situation have been led to believe that a satisfactory machine for cotton picking has already been perfected. This has led to obscuring the real needs of the cotton farmer.

As a cotton field from early summer until a frost has cotton in all stages of development, it is doubtful if any cotton-picking machine can ever be used that will be practical, yet it is possible that a variety of cotton may be produced through careful experimentation that will ripen all at once. The Southern farmers' hope is in expert agriculture propagation. J. E. EDINGTON.

The Oil Industry Needs an Improved Drill—He Who Produces It Will Save the Industry.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The governors of oil-producing States recently got together in an effort to solve the economic problem of overproduction. After much debating nothing was accomplished.

Clarence E. Reed, oil engineer, and the writer were discussing the conference recently and during this conference Mr. Reed said:

"The oil industry must overcome the tremendous losses due to the inability of present equipment to insure the drilling of a straight hole."

Here is sound wisdom from a man who has devoted many years to the production of oil and who is known throughout the midcontinent and California oil fields. Fundamental changes are needed to obtain bits which will insure straighter oil-hole drilling and last longer. Here is opportunity staring some genius in the face, for the man who invents such equipment will surely be hailed as the savior of the oil industry.

In Praise of the Naval Hospital.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In regard to Washington hospitals permit me through your columns to outline my experience at the Naval Hospital.

For the past nine months I have been a patient at this hospital. I know but little of other hospitals, but on entering the Naval Hospital I was impressed with the scrupulous cleanliness combined with all the home comforts.

Under the command of Capt. Richardson, the hospital is everything that could be expected. The officers on duty are courteous and intelligent in their treatment of patients.

The food served is nutritious and wholesome, and the service compares favorably with that of any first-class cafeteria in Washington. The Red Cross takes deep interest in the patients, furnishing reading matter and making available entertainment.

THEODORE G. THOMAS.

A NETHERLAND CITY.

In Hugo Grotius birthday year, writes a contributor in the Springfield Republican, I made a special trip to Delft, his home town, noted more generally in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries for its wonderful pottery and porcelain. This old-fashioned Dutch town on the Schie, with its beautiful, clean canals bordered by lime trees, is a place of uncommon interest. Its old palace was the home of William the Silent, Prince of Orange, the founder of Dutch independence, and the bullet holes on the staircase where he was assassinated are still pointed out. I was interested to note that the Delft ware industry is now reviving again and many a souvenir of its beauty is carried away by its thousands of visitors.

Amersfoort on the Eem smothered in chestnuts and lilac, in the midst of a sandy region, is always worth a visit, on account of its great tower of St. Mary. It was built about 1500 and is the finest Gothic pyramid in Holland. The little town is simply a maze surrounding it, every street evidently turning to get a view of it. The medieval gateways of the town are of more than passing interest. Sentinels used to pace to and fro on their parapets once, but now they are a place for children's play. The fine old flowering trees make Amersfoort a veritable garden city, and a good place in which to spend a few days for visiting the ancient towns of Nijkerk, Eluburg, and Harderwijk on the shore of the Zuyder Zee and the pretty little village of Nunspeet, a favorite resort of artists.

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES

Capital of 40 Years Ago to Be Recalled

By JEAN ELIOT.

UNDER the title "In Washington, Reminiscences of a Diplomat," a volume is now in the hands of the publishers, which gives promise of very interesting reading. But don't look forward to any indiscreet revelations, for the book deals with the Washington of nearly 40 years ago. It is the work of Col. Alexander Greger who, for a dozen years, was secretary of the Russian Embassy in Washington, frequently serving as Charge d'Affaires, and who drifted to Washington again, when his vast fortune was swept away by the Russian revolution and when he was faced with the prospect of making a living.

In the period of which he writes in his forthcoming book—1884 to 1894— Col. Greger must have been a glamorous figure. Young, distinguished, smart, wealthy and hospitable, he was described by a writer of the period as "the cleverest, least handsome and most popular diplomat of the European contingent." His parties were famous for originality and lavish beauty and he was always promoting something amusing or contributing something vividly picturesque to life in Washington.

One day, given a fall of snow, he would appear dashing through the country in a troika, manned by a mujik out of Tolstoy and drawn by a magnificent Orloff stallion. Next, he would be planning a paper chase, perhaps arranged for the entertainment of Mrs. Cleveland, the President's bride, with small horse shoes of diamonds to be presented as favors to the winners. Indeed, Col. Greger introduced the paper chase to Washington and did much to popularize horseback riding with the ladies—a woman on horseback having previously been something for small boys to jeer at.

While he was popular as a playboy, Col. Greger was also to the front in serious affairs. The ratification of an extradition treaty between Russia and the United States, against tremendous odds, was regarded as a feather in his cap. And Clara Barton mentions the young diplomat in her book, "The Story of the Red Cross," for the constructive help given that organization.

At this period Col. Greger was a bachelor, but he afterward married an American lady, Miss Virginia Osterman, daughter of Col. John Osterman, of Trenton, N. J. She shared with him a brilliant life at the Russian court, most magnificent in history, and the friendship of the czar and czarina. She shared also the terrors of the revolutionary days and ran a hospital in France while Col. Greger was serving with the British army, with which he had enlisted. Wounded at Soissons, he came out of unconsciousness to find his wife nursing him. But he expressed no surprise, having, as he declared, always found her beside him when he needed her. And now Mme. Greger shares with her husband an existence which is pleasant enough, but simple by contrast with past magnificence.

If this had happened to you or me, we'd probably feel sorry for ourselves, but it would be impertinence to feel sorry for one so gay and debonair as Col. Greger as he faces this new life. He speaks no less than sixteen languages, has taught several of them and served as translator in many instances. Moreover, he has written much on scientific and political subjects, although "In Washington" will be his first venture in a lighter vein.

Col. and Mme. Greger have a charming apartment in 1400 Sixteenth street. Between the colonel's departure from Washington and his return 30 years or so later, he and Mme. Greger lived in many European capitals and also in South America, as Col. Greger was his country's minister in Brazil and Argentina.

The new book is promised for the early autumn. Through it will move such figures as President and Mrs. Cleveland, young Henry Cabot Lodge, then but recently elected to the Senate from Massachusetts; Baron Struve, the Russian Ambassador; Mr. Spring Rice, later to be British Ambassador; Mr. Perry Belmont, all among the young bloods of the day.

Son Is Born To Dunckels, Now in Paris

Infant Is Grandson of Former Senator Howard Sutherland.

Mr. Howard Sutherland, formerly senator from West Virginia, and now Alien Property Custodian, has received a cable announcing the birth of a son to his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Wallis Bleecker Dunckel, who are now living in Paris. Mrs. Sutherland is spending the summer in Paris and is now happily making the acquaintance of her new grandson.

Before her marriage Mrs. Dunckel was Miss Margaret Sutherland. She is one of a bevy of charming girls known affectionately as the "seven Sutherland sisters," although they never quite equaled the number of these ladies of the flowing locks. Mrs. Stanley Harris, who was Miss Elizabeth Sutherland until she married the one-time manager of the Washington Baseball Club, is a sister of Mrs. Dunckel. Another sister, Mrs. Lyon, died several years ago, and there is still one more married sister, Mrs. Jack Walker, who lives in West Virginia. Miss Katherine Sutherland is the only one of the girls now unmarried. She has been keeping her father company in Washington during her mother's absence abroad and recently went with him to White Sulphur Springs for a brief holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. Evan E. Young have sent out invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Helen Beatrice Young, to Mr. Kenneth Ernest Gray on Saturday, August 3 in the Erwin Methodist Episcopal Church at Syracuse, N. Y. Mr. Young is U. S. Minister to the Dominican Republic and he and Mrs. Young have come to this country on leave in order that their daughter might be married at their old home in Syracuse.

Col. Henry W. Anderson, of Richmond, Va., who is a member of the National Commission on Law Observance and Enforcement, is making his headquarters at the Mayflower during his stay in Washington.

Mrs. Frank Govern and her son, Mr. Frank Whitton Govern, are on a motor trip to Hamilton, Ontario, and will spend several weeks there with relatives.

Mr. Louis G. Dreyfus, sr., of Santa Barbara, Calif., is the guest of his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Louis G. Dreyfus, jr., in their apartment at the Mayflower. Mr. Louis G. Dreyfus, jr., is a consul general in the foreign service of the United States.

The First Assistant Postmaster General, Mr. Arch Coleman, expects to be joined by Mrs. Coleman at the Wardman Park Hotel in September. Mrs. Coleman has remained at their home in the west.

Mrs. James R. Mann has closed her apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street and has gone to Lenox, Mass., in the Berkshire Hills, to remain for six weeks.

Mr. Charles C. Eberhardt, U. S. Minister to Guatemala, has left Washington after a short visit. He is in this country on leave.

Capital Folk To See Races At Saratoga

Ancient Spa Still Attracts Smart Society for Brief Season.

The name of Mrs. James F. Curtis seems to be missing from the list of boxholders for the Saratoga racing season, which opens next Monday. But it's dollars to doughnuts that she'll be on hand when the horses go to the post, and it is more than probable that she will have some of her horses entered.

Mrs. Curtis is the one Washingtonian of petticoat persuasion who races under her own colors unless one may include in this category Mrs. William F. R. Hitt (Katherine Elkins), who long ago deserted Washington to make her home in Middleburg, Va.

Saratoga Springs, once the smartest of all smart resorts, may have lost its charm as a spa, but as the center of "smart" racing, it still has no peer. And there is a great deal of entertaining there during the season, when those whose names loom large in the social registers of New York, Philiadelphia, Washington and a score of cities desert the more modern playgrounds for Saratoga.

The Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Ogden L. Mills have

MEXICANS APPROVE BILL ON LABOR LAW

Congress Expected to Pass Measure Without Major Changes.

ENFORCED BY BOARDS

Mexico City, July 22 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—After prolonged conferences between labor and capital here the federal labor law will be introduced in the Mexican congress next week. It is expected that it will be enacted without important changes.

The measure is based on a survey made several months ago by President Emilio Portes Gil.

If passed, the law will be administered primarily by ten federal labor boards. Each will be composed of a president designated by the government and three representatives of workers and employers for each industry.

In each State will be set up a state board of arbitration and conciliation and in each municipality there will be a similar board presided over by the mayor and representatives of workers and employers.

Commissions in Plants.

Within individual industrial plants there will also be maintained mixed commissioners of employers and employes whose function shall be "to cooperate in the adoption of new methods, advise in whatever matters would aid the enterprise to advance, solve differences between workmen and employers, communicate to employers the complaints of workers, see that hygienic and preventive measures are implanted in factories and furnish the state and federal boards of conciliation and arbitration with information."

The labor bill legalizes the right to strike and the right of both workmen and employers to organize syndicates and provides penalties for the failure of either group to respect decisions of the boards of conciliation and arbitration.

It makes one day's rest in seven compulsory and establishes the eight-hour day as the legal standard, permitting, however, extra hours at double pay when necessity requires. It also makes vacations with pay compulsory, giving four working days annually after one year of employment, six working days after two years and twelve working days after five years.

Wages Must Be Paid Weekly.

Wages of urban workers, with the exception of domestics, must be paid weekly under the provisions of the bill. Domestics must be paid every fifteen days. Farm hands must also be paid every fifteen days. Only 20 per cent of wages may be attached for any cause.

The bill contains the following provision in relation to a minimum wage: "A minimum wage is that which suffices, considering the conditions in each region, to satisfy the normal necessities of a worker's life, his education and his honest pleasures, considering him as the head of a family. The rate of the minimum wage shall be fixed by a special commission in each municipality composed of the mayor and an equal number of representatives of workers and employers. Only Mexicans can represent workers and employers."

Commissions shall also fix a minimum wage for women and for minors. Central boards will hear appeals.

Miss Eva Mae Englar Wed to Mr. Shreve.

Miss Eva Mae Englar, daughter of Mr and Mrs. George E. Englar, of York, Pa., was married here yesterday to Mr. Wellington Hammond Shreve, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel T. Shreve. The ceremony took place at 10 o'clock in the Curch of the Transfiguration, the rector, the Rev. John J. Queally, officiating.

The bride wore a white silk ensemble, with hat, shoes and gloves to match, and carried sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley. She was given in marriage by her father. Her sister, Miss Jean Englar, was maid of honor, and Mr. Shreve had his brother, Mr. Franklin Shreve, as best man. The ceremony was followed by a wedding breakfast at the home of the bridegroom's parents, 4907 Illinois avenue. When the couple left for their wedding trip to Niagara Falls and Canada, the bride wore an orchid ensemble, with a hat to match.

The Rev. Sparling And Wife to Sail.

The Rev. Christopher Philip Sparling, former rector of St. John's Church, Georgetown, and Mrs. Sparling will sail from New York for England, Saturday, to spend their vacation. Their daughter, Miss Audrey Sparling, will visit Miss Ruth Green, of Washington, in Williamstown, Mass., going later to Canada.

Mrs. B. H. Elliott and her daughters, Mrs. Moncure Burke Berg and Miss Lucille Elliott, will sail tomorrow on the Mauretania for a two months' tour of England and the Continent. They will meet Mrs. Elliott's son-in-law and daughter, Lieut. and Mrs. Herbert Davis Vigel, who have been on duty in Berlin.

Mrs. Harold Walker is passing several weeks at her estate, Webley, on the Eastern Shore of Maryland. She has been joined by her son, Mr. Aldace Walker, who recently returned from a trip to South America.

Miss Evelyn Walker is visiting in France and will not return to this country until the fall, when the Walkers will probably take an apartment in New York, where Mr. Walker is in business.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Binns Tebbs and their daughter and son, Lillian Beverley Tebbs and Charles Binns Tebbs, jr., have returned to their home, 2230 Cathedral avenue, from a four-week trip to Tulsa, Okla., where they visited Mr. and Mrs. William L. THE DOUBLE

By EDGAR WALLACE

SYNOPSIS.

Dick Staines, department inspector, happens upon mysterious intruders in the deserted house of Walter Derrick, jovial neighbor of Tommy Weald whom Dick is visiting. One of them, a woman, bears a striking resemblance to beautiful Mary Dane, a nurse, whom Dick secretly admires. When Lordy Brown, escaped convict from Africa, attacks Mary, insisting that she is Mary Devilliers, of Capetown, Dick concludes that the girl has a dangerous double who is involved in the invasions of Derrick's house. And then one night Dick finds Lordy Brown dead in Derrick's house, and again the thumbprint of the mysterious Slouch murderer, the despair of the police for ten long years, is seen. On learning of the tragedy in his house Derrick is distraught, but he scoffs at his caretaker's story of seeing the ghost of old Joshua Derrick, his miser-father.

CHAPTER XV—CONTINUED.

"No good being ironical with me, old boy. That's the word, isn't it, ironical? She wasn't exactly overwhelmed, but she said she'd like nothing better. In fact, old boy, she accepted me with certain reservations."

Dick turned in his seat and looked at his friend open-mouthed. Tommy was smiling smugly.

"With reservations," he said. "As soon as this old boy pops off she's going to give up nursing, and there you are. And then—there'll be a new Countess of Weald in the land. And topping she will look in a dinky little coronet—I saw one at Gray's the other day—perfectly ripping!"

He was speaking the truth, he was not boasting. These truths came home to Dick.

"But—but——"

"You needn't start butting; there it is. She's the dearest thing on earth, old boy, and fearfully sensible. When I brought her a diamond ring she wouldn't wear it—said it looked too flash—well, she didn't say it was 'too flash,' but you know what I mean—something ladylike that meant the same thing. So I bought the other one; didn't you notice she was wearing it?"

The town and promenade of Margate were wobbling up and down before Dick's disordered eyes. His head reeled. Was this a very bad dream or a very bad joke? He sought information as to the latter.

"No joke at all." Tommy settled himself more comfortably in his seat. "I mean, even peers of the realm get married. There's nothing comic about that. If they didn't get married," he added, as the brilliant thought occurred to him, "I shouldn't have been here, old boy. How does that strike you?"

Dick Staines was stunned. All that he had come to ask had gone from his mind. Here was the tragic, incredible fact, to occupy his brain to the exclusion of every other thought. Mary Dane as engaged. What was she—coquette? What kind of a coquette was she who could tell him . . .

He took a tight hold of himself.

"I heartily congratulate you, Tommy."

"Thanks," said Tommy.

His complacency was such that Dick could have thrown him over the cliff without compunction.

"Jane and I——"

"Jane? You mean Mary?"

"Her name is Jane Mary. I call her Mary Jane. As a matter of fact, her people call her Jane—or did call her Jane. It's a funny thing how everybody has a different name at home to what they have in public. My gov'nor used to call me 'Dogeye' —sort of term of affection. Anyway, she asked me to call her Jane when we were alone—when I say she asked me, I mean she allows me. It's a fearful privilege, old boy," he added hastily, "and given only to her best friends. You're a very good friend of hers——"

"I shall not call her Jane," said Dick with emphasis.

He did not know whether to laugh or to be angry; there was no further interest for him to the interview which she had promised, and he would have returned by the first train, unmindful of his mission, but for his promise. He shrugged his shoulders contemptuously. It would not be a very painful interview; it might be a little disconcerting, but by that time he would be, he hoped, as calm and as cold-blooded as she, who, engaged to another man, had dared say what she had. A coquette . . . Then he had a mental picture of her eyes, very steady, very honest. He looked at Tommy Weald; his lordship's head was nodding, his rather large mouth was open and his eyes were closed. It was the title. . . . Again he saw her eyes. In his imagination he saw them pained and hurt.

"I can't understand it," he said aloud.

Tommy woke up with a start.

"It's the sun—I always get drowsy in the morning. As a matter of fact it's the air. Of course, it's the air—comes straight down from the North Pole, old boy, fearfully bracing!"

"When do you expect to get married?"

Tommy spread out his plump palms to indicate his uncertainty.

"I don't know. St. George's, Hanover Square, of course, old boy, with full choral service and all my aunts—no, I think it had better be a registrar's office. The aunts will be fearfully peeved. Especially the three with the daughters. But I don't believe in intermarrying with one's own family, old boy. It's quite wrong, and I'm naturally hygienic."

The last words were murmured; his chin sunk again, his hands were clasped across his well-developed figure. His chin sank lower and lower. Dick looked at the chosen of Mary Dane and was neither amused nor contemptuous. He loved him for the goodness of his heart and the general effervescence of his character. He was a good friend—would certainly be a good husband.

Punctually to the minute a Margate taxi turned from the main road and came slowly along the crowded front of Westgate, and the girl got out. She was not wearing her nurse's costume, but the gray dress which gave her complexion a darker and richer tint. He had always thought it was pale before; now he could value her delicate coloring.

"You don't want to go to the beach, do you? Do you mind walking up toward Margate?"

He fell by her side, and they paced in silence along an endless road of small and large villas, each designed apparently by an architect who had lost his reason until they came to a clear stretch of grass and soil, where only a few nursemaids were visible.

"Let us sit on the grass," she said. "People will think we're an engaged couple down for the day, but you'll survive that."

He had an idea that she made that provocative statement deliberately. He was not prepared to accept the challenge.

"Well? What do you want to see me about?"

"Why did you ask me to see you to the station the other night?"

She was plucking at the grass and did not look up.

"Was that an unusual request? I mean isn't it an ordinary thing? Why do you think I asked you?" she said, raising her eyes.

"During my absence somebody got into Derrick's house and hammered down a part of the wall, evidently searching for gold which is believed to be hidden—they were the same people who were there before, with one exception. The woman whose dressed reeked of Sans Atout did not seem to be among those present."

She smiled at the flippancy.

"Me? And are you suggesting that I lured you away from the house in order that these—impossible friends of mine—burglar friends, that is to say—should destroy Mr. Derrick's wall?"

He was silent.

"Is that your suggestion?" she asked.

"I'm not suggesting anything." He knew how lame and weak he was being. "I am just asking you whether——"

"So far you've only expressed a desire to know why I asked you to take me to the station. I think that has the most natural explanation."

"I'm going a little farther."

He was desperate, and to his dismay out of breath. Why he should be, knowing that this girl was the fiancee of another man, was astounding to him.

"I'm constantly meeting you or your double in London and elsewhere. I have a suspicion—and when I say 'suspicion' I mean he word—that you are in some way mixed up with the crowd—I don't know for what reason, for what purpose, but I might help you. 'Mary'—he laid his hand on hers and she let it lie—"I haven't come to collect information as a police officer. I've come to offer my help as a friend. If in any of these mad adventures of yours——"

"Or my double," she interrupted.

"—Or your double—you are arrested, I can do nothing. But I can do something now; I can make all your risks unnecessary. Won't you give me a little confidence?"

She shook her head half-heartedly, looked away over the blue sea, and then suddenly brought her eyes back to him.

Today's True Detective Story

By VANCE WYNN

The Conscientious Objector

It was in the darkest days of the World War that the British government assigned Herbert Booth to the difficult and dangerous task of watching over the revolutionists in the empire.

He was given the odd title of "P. M. S 2." Translated, this meant parliamentary military secretary, second section. It meant everything to those who were responsible for the war. It meant nothing to the general public.

Booth, who had youth and courage, was the man behind the scenes. He reported regularly to his superiors and his information was of the highest value. It is hinted that he gave news once of an attempt to poison Lloyd George by means of poison darts, which were to be fired at him while he was playing golf on Walton Heath.

But his chief occupation was in getting at the truth regarding defective munitions of war. In order to work effectively, he went about the country as a conscientious objector. He became popularly known as "Brother Bert," and under that title addressed more than one radical meeting. After the war one of the English newspapers made an attack upon him, saying that his activities were discreditable. He promptly sued for slander and a British jury gave him substantial damages.

It is certain that there were many times during the war when his life was in danger. It is equally certain that the hazardous work he was doing was for the sake of his country. In view of this it did seem rather hard to be the subject of attack after the war was over.

The most thrilling adventure in his lively career was when he attended a revolutionary meeting in London for the purpose of obtaining information for the government. He knew where this meeting was to be held and he also knew that it was necessary to have a card in order to gain admittance. He had to be there. How could he get in? In this difficulty he bethought himself of an anti-English agitator with whom he had become acquainted during his tours among the conscientious objectors. He called upon this man and told him that he had lost his ticket, but that he was extremely anxious to attend the meeting.

"You just come with me," was the confident reply, "and they won't dare turn you down."

So at the appointed hour the two men presented themselves at the door of the hall where the meeting was to be held. The agitator was admitted without question, but the doortender said that Booth could not enter. The agitator was in a fury:

"I vouch for him," he cried. "Isn't that enough? I know he's a good man. I've attended many meetings with him. Why, if you exclude a man like this you'll be worse than the bloomin' capitalists you are ravin' about."

In the end he was admitted, but after the meeting began there was an incident which caused the cold chills to race up and down the spine of "Brother Bert." One of the members arose in his place and solemnly declared that a spy was in their midst. The greatest excitement prevailed and there were cries of "Who is it?"

"It's a man called Booth who has been engaged to find out our secrets."

Brother Bert thought his hour had come, and he sat still, with half-closed eyes, waiting the course of events. But the chap who had made the accusation pointed to a little fellow seated near the door and said, "There is your man."

Booth sat perfectly still while a half dozen husky members literally threw the innocent victim into the street. The real culprit got out of the room and informed the Government of the proceedings. The next day the ringleaders of the gathering were placed under lock and key.

Great Gas Well Burns 3 Days After Igniting

Monroe, La., July 22 (A.P.).—A great gasser, estimated to have a maximum of 70,000,000 to 100,000,000 cubic feet of gas daily, continued to blaze today, following its ignition Friday shortly after it was blown in.

The gasser, in Morehouse Parish, near Starlington, is a test of the Consolidated Carbon Co. It is expected the hole will be allowed to burn itself out. The fire is not regarded as bearing serious loss, however, as shallow level gas is not usually recoverable.

Behind the Screens

With NELSON B. BELL

JUST as the small theater owner is beginning to see alight flickers of daylight penetrating the deep gloom that has been his since the advent of the sound picture, with its exorbitant costs for installation and attendant services, along comes another specter to harass him. I refer, of course, to the wide-angle picture that threatens to bring about even more drastic changes in motion picture projection than were entailed by the addition of sound to movement.

Plans are well under way for the amelioration of the hardship imposed upon the small theater man by the coming of the articulate screen. It is only a matter of weathering the storm a little longer, and all will be well. Production of apparatus has reached a point where it will be possible to effect 5,000 installations during the ensuing year. With this increased output and the consequent growth in volume of business has come at least the prospect of lower initial costs for the necessary mechanical equipment.

Not only that, but by a pooling of interests among the manufacturers, arrangements have been perfected whereby the theater operator of limited capital can buy his sound devices on the easy payment plan—if any payments ever are easy—much in the manner of the purchase of an automobile out of income. Thus, for the time being at least, the situation is saved for the exhibitor who has felt that the sound picture, among other things, sounded his doom.

It is a peculiar anomaly that the sound and dialogue pictures are best in the houses that heretofore have been unable to afford them—that is, theoretically. The compactness of the small interior, its freedom from problems for the acoustical engineers and the "short throw" necessary for good projection all are in favor of the small house.

Of the wide-angle proposition I am not so sure. Here use is made of a wholly new size of film, new methods of photography and a completely revolutionized system of projection. How the small house and the man of small means will manage to cope with these difficult requirements remains to be seen.

How the big houses will, does also, for that matter.

Incidentally, the Paramount private screening of the Magnafilm at the Rivoli Theater in New York last week was sprung as a surprise on the industry. It seems that Paramount has been quietly going ahead with its own research work and has evolved a scheme of wide-angle photography and projection that has returned better results than that devised by George Spoor and earlier divulged.

The picture shown by Paramount consumed a total running time of a trifle more than 36 minutes and embodied sound and color in addition to motion. It recorded the complete performance given by the Publix road show unit appearing this week at the Palace, with Johnny Burke as featured comedian.

The seriousness of the injury sustained by William Fox last week when his Rolls Royce was tipped over on Long Island and his chauffeur instantly killed, has been carefully guarded from the public.

Mr. Fox suffered so great a loss of blood that a transfusion was necessary, a pint being used for that purpose. It was at first believed that he also had suffered a fracture of the skull, but this fear proved to be groundless. The laceration and swelling of his face and head were so severe that it was at first difficult to determine the exact extent of his head injuries. They fortunately proved to be less than was feared.

Two former Washington theater organists are at the present time playing in picture houses at Atlantic City. Milton Davis, long one of the Crandall ace artists at the console and now sound supervisor for the Warner Brothers at the shore resort, is playing one of the world's largest pipe organs in the new Warner Brothers Theater on the boardwalk and Sylvia Klavans Kaplowitz is performing a like function on the less pretentious instrument at the Globe Theater.

From time to time, it falls within the power of a commentator on the state of the cinema to offer evidence that the industry is not quite what you might call going to the dogs. The latest exhibit is in the form of a statement from Paramount-Famous-Lasky to the effect that the second quarter profits for 1929 set a new high record. After all charges and taxes have been deducted, Mr. Zukor and the boys figure that they have $2,550,000 left for the three months ending June 29.

And speaking of Mr. Zukor, he recently turned down an offer of $90,000,000 for his holdings in the company which he founded. The price becomes all the more remarkable when it is known that Paramount-Famous-Lasky is only capitalized for $65,000,000.

Oh, well, I'm not so bad off, at that—I'm worth less than two million!

A Green Felt For Mid-Summer

DEAR GENEVIEVE:

Washington as a summer resort is now considered perfectly ideal. No place in the country could be pleasanter than the National Capital this summer. Suddenly realizing that everything for enjoyment is possible right here, and near here, scores of people have changed their vacation plans and have decided to stay around home for their holiday, or to postpone their trips away until a later date.

Nevertheless European travel still keeps up, and scarcely a day goes by that I do not send a "bon voyage" telegram to some friend sailing for the other side. Do I wish I were going? You ask me?

The Speed Boats At Hains' Point

—are of special interest to visiting tourists. The other day I stopped by for a quick ride on the Potomac, and happened to be in a boat with a family which, it developed, were on a motor tour from the West. One of the boys had never been in a speed boat before, and how he did love it! As I left the dock they were all starting out on their third ride and were discussing chartering a boat for several hours the following day.

So the speed boats are a distinct addition to "things to do" in the National Capital, both as an attraction to visitors within our gates and for those of us who spend most of our time here. They are under the same management as Hoover Field. By the way, do you fly much? Hoover Field is owned and operated by the Potomac Flying Service, if I am not mistaken, and has become one of the most active commercial flying fields in the country.

The speed boats are enjoying their first summer in public service on the Potomac river. Their popularity increases daily, and the indications are that more boats will be added presently to the fleet of trim Gar Woods which adorn the water at Hains' Point.

As you know, the fare is only $1 for a ride, and as the boats go very fast you cover a great distance in that time.

Sylphlike As A Movie Star

—that's what every one will be who is taking the famous Eighteen Day Diet which Hollywood beauties have made famous. It is the first diet I ever heard of which seems adequate from a standpoint of nourishment and variety. Numbers of the debutantes have been on it now for a week or ten days, and are enjoying the delicious food as well as the results they can see.

The Mayflower Coffee Shoppe is featuring this diet, and no matter when you go in, you may order the meal you want. It might be the seventh day breakfast or the tenth day dinner, but whatever it is the Mayflower Coffee Shoppe is prepared to serve it to you.

Needless to say the regular a la carte menus are always available.

Portraits of Children At Underwood & Underwood's

—are on display in their windows this week. This internationally famous studio has always been known for its wonderful pictures of children. Since they added to their equipment the marvelous camera with the double exposure, which snaps the most fleeting expressions, the pictures of children are more attractive than ever and, surely, more lifelike.

Really, many of the children look as though they could step right out of the pictures and speak to you. Stop by and look at the exhibit in the windows this week. It will give you a new idea of the possibilities of photography.

The 25 per cent discount is still in effect for all studio portraits. This includes new sittings as well as pictures made from plates already on file. Even if you were not intending to use your photographs at once it is wise to order them when you have the privilege of this wonderful discount.

By the way, have you ever noticed the great interest which people from distant places take in the studio of Underwood & Underwood? Time and again I have been with new arrivals in the city who have burst out in exclamations when they pass the studio on Connecticut avenue at N street, "Why, there is Underwood's!" It is easy to understand, for they have seen their picture service all over the world.

The Travel Bureau In the Willard Hotel

—is kept as busy as can be, with inquiries about trips and sailings and goodness knows what. The C. C. Drake Travel Bureau, in Washington, Philadelphia and Baltimore, is under the management of Miss Elizabeth Parsons, who has had so many seasons' experience in taking parties over Europe.

Miss Moorhead is in charge of the bureau in the Willard Hotel, and is a young woman of travel herself, so is equipped to be of inestimable service in planning a trip, organizing a party or determining which sailings will be best for you. Do go in to see her and ask about a party sailing on the Ile de France late this month or early in August.

Since the Cavalier Became Popular

—many people ask themselves, how they ever did without this charming little cafe at 3500 Fourteenth street. The moderate prices which prevail at the Cavalier are definite attractions, but the good food and quiet, efficient service in such pleasant surroundings would bring people back, no matter what the cost. Very nice, however, to be able to have as much enjoyment for such a trifling expense.

The Cavalier Cafe, 3500 Fourteenth street, serves dinner, luncheon and breakfast, and each one better than the other.

Just Like a Mountain Breeze

—is the cool zephyr which blows through the Powhatan Roof. The delights of this beautiful roof garden are well appreciated by hundreds of grateful visitors to Washington and people who live here, too.

To dine and dance on the roof of The Powhatan is the most diverting thing you could possibly do. There is no cover charge up to 9 o'clock, and only one dollar then, so it is a good place to go for an inexpensive party.

The crowd you see at The Powhatan is quite apt to include people you know or know of, and you frequently see tables of illustrious personages, whose faces are familiar to you. The Powhatan Roof is recommended most heartily for really enjoyable festivity.

Plage Deauville Will Always Be

—a unique and amusing place to swim and dance to tea and dine. There is nothing in town the least bit like it. Meyer Davis' Chantecler Orchestra plays for tea and for dinner and those of the young set who are in town are sure to be found there. The cool weather of the past week has seemed to enhance the charms of Plage Deauville rather than to detract from them. A swim in the pool is really invigorating, and to dance on the raised pavilion is like dancing on shipboard, only better.

The effect at night is very pretty, and with a bright moon shining overhead nothing could be more delightful. The Plage Deauville is at Wardman Park Hotel, as you well know. Make your reservations beforehand for dinner, but for tea it is not necessary.

Affectionately,

Bab

Some High-Value Shares Close From 10 to 50 Points Lower.

CALL FUNDS 7 PER CENT

New York, July 22 (A.P.).—Despite a sharp upturn in grain prices and a series of highly satisfactory earnings reports, the stock market fell into the most decisive slump today that has been witnessed since May. The decline was orderly, however, with only 3,678,480 shares changing hands. Most losses were limited to a few points, although a few high-priced issues closed from 10 to 50 points lower.

Although the day's news was predominantly bullish, the market appeared to have discounted the favorable condition of industry for the time being and to have reached an overbought condition. This state of affairs has been anticipated by conservative traders for about a fortnight, as evidenced by the liquidation of various issues under the cover of violent bullish demonstrations in others. Also, several commission houses have ben warning their customers to exercise caution.

Call money renewed at 7 per cent for the first time in two weeks, and held at that figure all day, although about $20,000,000 in loans were called. Money brokers said the plentiful supply was due rather to lack of demand than to influx of new funds. Time money held at 7¾ to 8 per cent for all maturities, and bankers regarded the credit outlook has still rather obscure.

Good Earnings Statements.

Prominent in the day's news were the earnings statements for the first half of the year of General Electric and Westinghouse Manufacturing, although the former was not disclosed until long after the close of the market. General Electric earned $4.26 per share, as compared to $3.38 in the like period of last year. Westinghouse net was equal to $4.92, compared to $3.31 in the first half of 1928.

Another important earnings statement for the period, appearing late in the day, was that of Chrysler Corporation, showing net of $4.06 per share on 4,452,609 shares, as compared to $3.98 a share on 2,704,356 in the corresponding period of last year, which was before the acquisition of Dodge Brothers.

A break of 22 points in Allied Chemical, later reduced by a point, was rather surprising to Wall Street, as big things have been looked for from its atmospheric nitrogen plant. The issue has been selling around 30 times last year's earnings, however. Adams Express fell back 50 points to $45 in a small turnover and Case Threshing lost 21 points.

Chemicals Under Pressure.

Chemicals generally were under pressure, Commercial Solvents losing 9 points, and Columbian Carbon 5. Ralls encountered considerable profit taking on their recent advance, such shares as New York Central, New Haven and Union Pacific losing 3 to 4 points, and Delaware and Hudson nearly 7. Motors were again heavy. Although Chrysler's earnings statement was expected to be fairly satisfactory, the stock sagged 1 point to within less than 2 points of its 1929 low, and General Motors dropped more than a point to a new 1929 low at 66⅜.

U. S. Steel lost more than 3 points, but some of the independents stood up fairly well. Bethlehem reached a new peak, but closed off a point, net. Youngstown mounted more than 3 points to a new top, and closed firm.

General Electric was a conspicuous strong spot, rising 11 points to a record price in anticipation of the earnings statement, and closing near the top. Westinghouse made a like showing. Selling up 7½ points to a new peak at 206 in response to its earnings.

Utilities Continue Upward.

A few of the utilities continued to climb. Detroit Edison mounting nearly 3 points to 330, the best price yet. Consolidated Gas, North American and Pacific Lighting sold up about 4 points to new tops, but their gains were not maintained. Public Service of New Jersey, American Telephone & Western Union, however, closed about 2 and 4 points lower.

Wheat futures shot up 7 cents a bushel and more in response to an upturn at Liverpool and continued lack of rains in Canada. Corn advanced about 3 cents a bushel.

Advances of about ¼ of a cent in refined sugar were announced. Cotton, however, fell $1.60 to $2.25 a bale in realizing and in response to better weather.

A sharp rally of ¼ of a cent to $4.85 5-16 in sterling cables featured the foreign exchange market. The Canadian dollar, on the other hand, sagged a little.

BOND PRICES YIELD UNDER NEW SELLING

FOREIGN GROUP QUIET

New York July 22 (A.P.).—The bond market today was reactionary, as selling became pronounced in the convertible list after an irregularly higher opening. Selling was inspired by the general decline in stocks, and the price range in some of the more volatile issues was as wide as 12½ points.

Money was easier, the call rate renewing at 7 and holding at that figure all day. Time money ruled unchanged, at 7¾ to 8. The market for bankers acceptances was quiet. A fair supply of bills were offered, with the asking rate on all maturities unchanged at 5⅛ per cent.

New financing was chiefly for municipalities. The city of Chicago placed the year's second largest municipal issue, offering at par $40,725,000 Board of Education 6 per cent tax anticipation warrants notes. This completes Chicago's short-term borrowing. In April Chicago marketed $50,000,000 5½ and 6 per cent warrant notes, and in May $9,135,000 Sanitary District 6 per cent warrant notes. Philadelphia opened bids on a $9,350,000 loan.

American I. G. Chemical 5½s were the feature of the convertibles, shooting up 5 points, to a new high, at 135, and then dropping to 122½, and closing at 124 for a net loss of 6 points. Sales totaled $463,000 par value. American International 5½s opened strong at 115½, a fraction under the year's high, and then sold off to close at 113 for a loss of a point.

The depression in the textile industry was reflected in the drop of more than a point in Botany Mills 6½s to a new low for the year at 60. Indiana Limestone 6s were another industrial issue to establish a new low.

Selling was fairly general in the rails, which have been selling at record high prices. New Haven Convertible Debenture 6s were an exception, mounting to a new top at 136½, where they closed, for a gain of 1¾. The Alleghany issues sold off, and Atchison Convertible 4½s opened at 163½ and then dropped to 148½ for a net loss of 5¼. The Seaboard issues were all weak, with the convertible 6s at 67⅜, a new low. In the tractions Interborough 6s established a new low at 49½ on a fractional decline.

The United States Government obligations displayed an improved tone, although the lower yielding Treasury Notes were inclined to heaviness.

Borrowings From Federal Reserve Institutions Also Bare Decline.

STOCK BUYING EXPANDS

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Decreases for the week of $25,000,000 in loans and investments and $60,000,000 in borrowings from Federal Reserve Banks and a gain of $49,000,000 in net demand deposits were shown yesterday in the Federal Reserve Board's condition statement of weekly reporting member banks in 101 leading cities on July 17.

Loans on securities declined $59,000,000 at all reporting banks and $74,000,000 in the New York district and increased $9,000,000 in the Chicago district. "All other" loans increased $19,000,000 in the New York district. $10,000,000 in the Chicago, $8,000,000 in the Minneapolis and $45,000,000 at all reporting banks.

Holdings of United States Government securities increased $9,000,

NATIONS ARE DIVIDED ON EUROPEAN UNION

Briand's Proposal to Form Cooperative League Given Mixed Reception.

U. S. ATTITUDE AWAITED

Paris, July 22 (A.P.).—Proposals for the organization of a "United States of Europe" or a "cooperative Europe," which are expected to be outlined at the League of Nations assembly in September by Foreign Minister Aristide Briand of France, have met with mixed reception in continental countries.

Although M. Briand has carefully intimated that the broad outline of his plan does not embrace the formation of a new political institution with a parliament and a president, information received in League of Nations circles, under whose aegis the new organization would be attempted, indicates that some publicists in smaller countries fear the plan would be tantamount to a new domination by the great powers in European affairs.

Danger of incurring the displeasure of the United States is mentioned as one of the liabilities of the scheme.

On the other hand, the idea already has received enthusiastic support from other sections of the continent, where the opinion is expressed that a "cooperative Europe," deemed a better title than "United States of Europe," is bound to come anyway; that M. Briand has sensed this and is convinced the moment has arrived to guide the movement into desirable channels.

Workers in various countries are said to be enthusiastic about the plan, believing it means more prosperity and reduced chances of war.

The royalist organ, Action Francaise, labels the Briand idea an absurdity, declaring it the resuscitation of the dream of Victor Hugo. The journal says it would be certain to offend the United States of America and cause a world war.

Under M. Briand's scheme European nations would consult each other on economic problems of common interest.

Enthusiasts of the plan anxiously await America's attitude. With the United States favorable in principle it is believed the project would be given great impetus.

It is expected his concrete suggestions to be made before the assembly of the League of Nations at Geneva in September, under whose aegis the new organization would be attempted, will hinge on the reception given his idea by the states that would comprise his European league and by the world in general.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, Weather Bureau.
Washington, Monday, July 22—8 p. m.

Forecast—For the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia, generally fair Tuesday and Wednesday; warmer Tuesday; gentle winds, mostly south and southwest.

The minor disturbance that was centered over eastern North Carolina Sunday night has moved slowly northward and dissipated, after causing general rains in the southern Appalachian region, and in the Atlantic States from New Jersey to South Carolina. The disturbance that was over northern Manitoba is advancing eastnortheastward with center over the Hudson Straits region. Hopes Advance, 29.28 inches, and a trough extends southwestward to northern Michigan. Still another disturbance is moving east-southeastward over Alberta and Montana. Medicine Hat, 29.64 inches, and pressure remains relatively low over the southern Rocky Mountain region, Pueblo, Colo., 29.74 inches. High pressure prevails over the Eastern States, the western Atlantic Ocean, and off the north Pacific Coast, and from Saskatchewan southeastward to northern Minnesota. Bismarck, N. Dak., 30.16 inches. Eureka, Calif., 30.14 inches, and Prince Albert, Sask., 30.08 inches. The temperature has risen in the South Atlantic States, the Lake region, the central valleys, and the northern Rocky Mountain region, and it has fallen in the northern States and northern Manitoba. The temperature continues below normal in the Atlantic States and the southern Appalachian region, but it is considerably above normal almost generally from the Rocky Mountain region eastward to the Mississippi Valley and the upper Lake region. Miles City, Mont., has a maximum of 98 degrees, and Minneapolis, Minn., 96 degrees.

The indications are for generally fair weather Tuesday and Wednesday in the Washington forecast district, except for local thunderstowers Tuesday afternoon or night in southern Florida and from the lower Lake region eastward over northern New York and northern New England. The temperature will be below Tuesday in the Eastern and southeastern States, and slightly lower Tuesday night or Wednesday in the lower Lake region, northern New York and northern New England.

LOTT REPLACES HUNTER ON U. S. DAVIS CUP TEAM

Almost the Naked Truth

By JAMES S. COLLINS.

NEW YORK, July 22 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The United States Lawn Tennis Association is still pulling rabbits out of a high hat to the mystification of a tennis public, which, however, is gradually getting wise to the fact that it is always to be expected that the U. S. L. T. A. will do the unexpected. When Bill Tilden's pal, Frank Hunter, was nominated for the Davis Cup interzone final singles against Germany in preference to George Lott, there were roars of disapproval. On the basis of their respective performances at Wimbledon, Lott clearly was entitled to the call over the slightly passe Hunter, the dissenters contended loudly.

The selection of Hunter over the youthful Chicagoan was ascribed to compulsion on the part of Tilden. The future, if not the current hopes of American tennis were being sacrificed to personal friendship and political pull, &c. The roaring did not subside until Hunter stepped out and defeated his German opponent with neatness and also dispatch. The subsidence of the dissenters was due to the dawning of a suspicion that maybe the selection committee knew just what it was doing when it sidetracked George for Francis.

Unofficial Explanation Is Trifle Lame.

Now comes the announcement that Lott will replace Hunter in the challenge round against France. Officially, no explanation of the change in the make-up of the team is forthcoming. Unofficially, several explanations are offered. For one thing, Lott showed more stuff at Wimbledon than Hunter did.

This explanation seems a trifle lame in view of the fact that what each showed at Wimbledon was just as well known before the matches with Germany as it is now, and perhaps better, the lapse of an additional week's time being conducive to forgetfulness. Another explanation is that the probability that Lacoste will not be able to play for France has scrambled strategic considerations and that Lott will fit better than Hunter into the new picture that Lacoste's nonparticipation would create. It is this department's opinion that the U. S. L. T. A. reversed itself through sheer force of habit.

U. S. L. T. A. Listens To None.

Of course, some of the critics of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, who wasted a lot of lung power when Hunter was named for the job against Germany now will insinuate that it was their protests that compelled this latest United States Lawn Tennis Association about-face.

The insinuation will receive scant attention. Everybody knows the United States Lawn Tennis Association is a law unto itself and never listens to any one, except possibly Bill Tilden once in a while, and it is obvious that it doesn't have to listen as attentively to Tilden these days as they did when he was the king of the courts and indispensable at the box office.

Athletics Nearing Flag Rapidly.

The returns are not all in yet by any means, but Philadelphia's chances of winning the American League nomination for the next world's series are improving with cruel rapidity. The Athletics, with a lead of ten and a half games, have 65 more games to play, while the Yankees have 68 to go. It will be pointed out, as it has been so often lately, that margins greater than this have evaporated in the August and September heat of other years. True, but not often. Last year the Athletics themselves overcame a lead of thirteen and a half games and actually passed the Yankees in September, but their punch was spent and they folded up.

Their collapse at that time has led to the expectation, or hope, in Yankee circles, that they would crack again this year as soon as they were hard pressed. The trouble seems to be that nobody is going to press them hard. The Yankees are in there with their sleeves rolled up, but doing nothing to put down in the diary in red ink.

Nats at Home To Engage West

White Sox to Open Invasion Today; Goslin Improves.

Nats Won 8, Lost 9, in West; New Infield to Perform.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

WITH their longest road trip of the season completed, the Nationals arrived in Washington last night to open their second 1929 home stand against the Western clubs this afternoon. The Chicago White Sox will be the guests, with Garland Braxton likely to southpaw against them, and Alphonse (Tommy) Thomas as manager Blackburne's most probable selection for the firing line. The Western invasion here calls for the White Sox, Indians and Tigers to meet the Nats in only 39 games, with Browns listed for four, although a postponed game with the Tigers will be played as a part of a double-header here on August 30.

Manager Johnson's team did not set the league on fire on its trip just ended. Its showing against the Western clubs was eight victories and nine defeats, the triumphs being scored as follows: Detroit, 2; Cleveland, 1; Chicago, 2, and St. Louis, 3. If the record is made up to include all games played since the team left the Capital City, it is even worse, for the Mackmen captured three and the Yankees two before Johnson took his men on the invasion of the other sector. Including these games, the figures are 8 victories and 14 losses.

Johnson Optimistic About Pitchers.

Although the Washington Club has been playing in-and-out baseball of late, the dope points to a better showing on the present home stay. For one reason, Leon (Goose) Goslin seems to have recovered his batting eye and to have recovered from the blow dealt him by Old Joe Slump, while Johnson believes he will get fair pitching from now on.

With respect to Hadley, Johnson admits that he is up in the air. "For the life of me I can not see how a fellow with all of his stuff is beaten as regularly as Hadley has been this season. I've tried every known plan to bring him around to form and have just about decided to work him regularly from now on in the hope that he'll finally find himself.

Johnson has been using a trick infield recently, due to the injuries of Joe Judge and Ossie Bluege, but he hopes that his regular first-sacker will be ready to get back in the line-up this afternoon. If not, home fans will get a chance to see Harley Boss in action, which will be quite a novelty, as Boss has confined his efforts mostly to bench-warming during the parts of the two seasons he has been a National.

With Bluege out nursing his trick knee, Jack Hayes has returned to the second base post, with Buddy Myer shifted back to third. Shortstop Joe Cronin has been suffering from "erroritis" of late, but he is the type of player who goes after everything and, as he gets many drives that others would not even try for, Manager Johnson is satisfied with his work.

Opposition Picks Spots For Southpaws.

During the coming home stand, fans no doubt will see more left-handed pitchers than they thought were in the majors. Opposing teams proved this weakness of the Nats to their own satisfaction earlier in the season, and literally southpawed Johnson's men to death on the trip just ended. Eight of Washington's fourteen losses were credited to pitchers who use the wrong arm on the recent tour, while not a single one of its eight victories was obtained against a portsider.

PUBLIC PARK CHOICES WIN IN DOUBLES

Mitchell-Buchanan, 1928 Champs, are Among Victors.

THE first round of doubles in the Washington public parks tennis championships passed without upsets yesterday, all of the seeded teams winning handily.

Dooley Mitchell and Bill Buchanan, 1928 champions and seeded No. 1 in the draw, disposed of the Stanton brothers, 6—4, 6—4, in a match marked by the ability of the defending title holders to meet the occasion when their rivals threatened. Mitchell's steady driving accounted for many of the winning counters.

Bob Considine, defending singles champion, carried forward his efforts to reach both singles and doubles finals by teaming with Herb Shepard and defeating Alvin Wasman and H. Ritzenberg, without the loss of a game.

Maj. L. S. Hobbs and Maj. J. H. Hills, doubles runners-up in the recent Army tournament at Columbia Country Club, advanced to the second round by trimming Stanley Haney and Fred Dodge, 6—4, 7—5.

Seeded Singles Players Have Troubles Today.

The going grows rougher for the seeded stars in the singles. Eight fourth-round matches are scheduled today, and of the sixteen players figuring in them six are seeded.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS.

New Stockholder Wins Court Aid In Suing for 2 Pct. of Schmeling

NEW YORK, July 22 (A.P.).—If anything more was necesary to add a final touch of complication to the muddled affairs of Max Schmeling, German heavyweight, one Frederick Kirsch provided it today in State Supreme Court.

Kirsch, one of the first friends of Schmeling and Arthur Buelow, the boxer's repudiated manager, when the pair arrived here almost penniless and unknown from Germany, brought suit for 2 per cent of Max's earnings. He filed an order signed by Supreme Court Justice William H. Black, requiring the Madison Square Garden Corporation and Charlie Rose, another of Schmeling's managers, to show cause tomorrow why a receiver should not be appointed to take over 2 per cent of the boxer's earnings in his recent triumph over Paulino Uzcudun.

Kirsch declared he placed Schmeling and Buelow on the road to fortune by introducing them to Rose, a former fight manager from England. Buelow assigned 10 per cent of Schmeling's earnings to Rose and the latter gave 3 per cent of this to Kirsch, the plaintiff declared.

Complications gathered thick and fast when Joe Jacobs, now Schmeling's choice as manager although the boxer's contract with Buelow still has over a year to run, entered the scene, acquiring a 3½ per cent interest in Schmeling from Buelow and 4 per cent from Rose. Since Schmeling rose to fame, Kirsch asserts, no one has bothered to solve the mathematical problem sufficiently to pay him the 2 per cent he claims.

Bertazzolo-Maloney Rematched in Boston

Boston, July 22 (A.P.).—The Boston Garden today announced the signing of Jimmy Maloney, Boston heavyweight, and Riccardo Bertazzolo, the latest Italian fistic importation, for a ten-round bout at Braves Field on August 12. These battlers met here several months ago and Bertazzolo won the decision on a foul.

Writ by Grand Circuit Halts Sheriff's Action

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 22 (A.P.).—Sheriff Byron J. Patterson this afternoon was served with a court order restraining him from interfering with pari-mutuel betting at the Grand Circuit races here. The order was signed by Circuit Judge Major L. Dunham, of Kent County.

A similar order was obtained and enforced last fall when races were brought in the Western Michigan Fair here. Judge Dunham issued that injunction also.

While Sheriff Patterson said he would ignore any order stopping him from doing his duty, as indicated by the law, he announced he would take no action until he had consulted with Prosecutor Daniel J. Jongman.

Dundee Lone Champion to Risk Title

Routis and Callahan in Nontitular Bouts This Week.

Fields Seeks Welter Crown Thursday in Detroit Fight.

NEW YORK, July 21 (A.P.).—Three fistic champions go to the well this week but only one of them is taking his pitcher with him.

Joe Dundee, whose welterweight championship crown has clung to the top of his head chiefly because the Baltimore Italian has deemed it inexpedient to place it in jeopardy, battles Jackie Fields, Pacific Coast star, in a titular bout at Floyd Fitsimmons' new arena in Detroit Thursday night.

The battle is set for fifteen rounds, first at that distance in Michigan. Dundee has lost numerous decisions in nontitular battles, his most recent set-backs being a two-round knockout at the hands of young Jack Thompson and two decision defeats at the hands of Al Mello.

Titles of 2 Other Champs Not at Stake.

Fields, recognized as 147-pound champion by the National Boxing Association, has waded through an imposing list of first class welterweights and probably will enter the ring a favorite.

New York's fans will see both Andre Routis, featherweight champion, and Mushy Callahan, junior welterweight title holder, in action at Ebbet's field Wednesday night but neither is risking his crown. Routis is to battle Al Singer, in the main ten-rounder. Callahan will tackle Jack (Kid) Berg, of England, a lightweight, in the semfnal. Another ten-rounder between Stanslaus Loayza, of Chile, and Joey Medil, of Chicago, lightweights, completes the outstanding bouts on the card which is for the benefit of the Wingate memorial fund.

Griffith-Peterson in Chicago Feature.

Chicago's chief attraction will be a ten-rounder between Tuffy Griffith and Big Boy Peterson at Mills Stadium Friday night. The weekly card at the Philadelphia National League ball park offers a duel between Billy Aldace and Johnny Jadick for the "lightweight championship of Pennsylvania." Al Brown, recognized in New York State as the "defending bantamweight champion," engages Mattie White, of Kensington, in the ten-round semifinal.

Argentine Heavy Gets Heeney Bout Aug. 14

New York, July 22 (A.P.).—Victorio Campolo, latest Argentine heavyweight threat, has been matched for a ten-round contest with Tom Heeney, the veteran New Zealander, on August 14 at Ebbets Field, Promoter Humbert Fugazy announced today.

The match between Kid Chocolate and Bud Taylor, originally billed by Fugazy for August 14, will be shifted either to August 7 or 21, the promoter said.

Pirates Add to Lead, Routing Robins, 13-3

Pittsburgh, July 22 (A.P.).—The Pittsburgh Pirates went on a wild rampage against Brooklyn pitching today and trounced the Robins, 13 to 3, in the only major league contest of the afternoon. The victory stretched Pittsburgh's lead in the National League to a game and a half over the idle Cubs.

Four errors added to the burdens of A. Moore and Dudley, Brooklyn pitchers, who were socked for sixteen hits. The Pirates tallied seven times in the fourth inning on four hits and two errors. Paul Waner hit a home run in the eighth. Brame pitched steady ball for the Pirates throughout.

ON CUP TEAM

GEORGE LOTT.

PARIS TALKS OF TENNIS CHANGE

Net Circles Surprised at Replacement of Hunter by Lott.

PARIS, July 22 (A.P.).—Replacement of Frank Hunter by George Lott on the American Davis Cup Team tonight caused more comment in French tennis circles than the definite news that Rene Acoste would not be a member of the defending team.

Apparently surprised by the switch in the American line-up, M. Tierre Gillou, captain of the French team, after announcing his own line-up would be picked from Henri Cochet, Jean Borotra, Jacques Brugnon and Christian Boussus, said:

"Hunter played better tennis in the French championships this year than I ever saw him exhibit before in Europe. I rather regret the passing of Hunter, a gentleman and fine player, but the Americans know their own business best."

Tilden Remains Quiet Concerning Change.

Tennis followers here understood Hunter had been beating Lott consistently in earlier Davis Cup trials and that his selection for the matches against Germany was a result of such tests.

Bill Tilden, after reaching here from Berlin with the rest of the American squad, was mostly noncommital.

"Of course, I can't comment," said Big Bill. "I never comment concerning my own personal selection, whether placed on the team or whether I am dropped, so I can not say anything concerning poor Frank, regardless of how I feel about it."

Nevertheless Tilden added that Hunter had been playing "magnificently."

Government League Leaders Battle Today

The second-half championship of the Government League may be decided today when the Union Printer and Navy Yard Teams meet in a postponed game. The typo nine is leading the race at present with four wins and one loss. The Navy Yard toasers have five wins and two losses. By winning today, the printers can clinch the flag. A loss would tie the leaders.

Other postponed games booked are as follows: Tomorrow, Navy Yard vs Interstate; Thursday, Printers vs Navy; July 29, Printers vs. Interstate, and July 31, Interstate vs. Navy.

Waner clouted a home run, double and single in the Pirate onslaught of the Robins and added four points to his fifth place average, now .337. The standing:

Tennis Chiefs Pin Hopes On Youth

Chicagoan and Tilden to Play in Singles Against French

Lacoste Is Definitely Lost to France for Play This Week.

By ALAN J. GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor).

NEW YORK, July 22 (A.P.).—Two significant developments today served to increase interest and prospects for a real battle when the United States plays France for the historic tennis trophy, the Davis Cup, starting this Friday at th Roland Garros Stadium in Paris.

Following announcement here of the selection of George M. Lott, jr., 22-year old Chicago star, to replace Francis T. Hunter, of New York, in the singles for the American Team, definite elimination of the ailing French ace, Rene Lacoste, from the forthcoming competition was revealed in Paris.

The American Team, as announced by the United States Lawn Tennis Association on behalf of Joseph W. Wear, of Philadelphia, chairman of the Davis Cup committee, will be composed of William T. Tilden 2d, George M. Lott, jr., William Allison and John Van Ryn. This is the tenth Davis Cup campaign for Tilden, but the trio of younger players named are all newcomers to challenge round competition.

Tilden and Lott Bear Singles Hopes.

The plans call for Tilden and Lott to play in the singles Friday and Sunday, with the doubles on Saturday intrusted to Van Ryn and Allison, Wimbledon champions.

The French team, as announced in Paris by M. Pierre Gillou, the captain, consists of Henri Cochet, Jean Borotra, Jacques Brugnon and Christian Boussus. Borotra, replacing La Coste, will share the singles responsibility with Cochet, holder of the American and Wimbledon championships. They also are expected to pair in the doubles, but this may depend on the outcome of the opening singles matches Friday. Brugnon may draw a doubles assignment.

The loss of La Coste comes as a severe blow to the French. No change is possible in the line-ups, under Davis Cup regulations, except as to the actual assignments given to the four players selected by each nation.

Replacement of Hunter Called Gamble.

Selection of Lott to replace Hunter, who shared the singles burden with Tilden against Germany and won both his matches, is generally regarded as a "gambler's choice." Hunter ranks one notch above Lott on the national singles list, their position being No. 2 and No. 3, but the official opinion apparently is that Lott is capable of rising to greater flights of tennis. The young Chicagoan thus is being given preference and his first real chance in the international field after occupying the background for several years.

Lott's record bears out the reasons for his choice. The Western youth at one time or another has beaten nearly all the top-ranking stars, including Tilden and Lacoste, last year. Lott won the national doubles championship with John Hennessey and was a member of the Davis Cup team until the challenge round. Hennessy played the singles but the Lott-Hennessey doubles combination was replaced by Tilden and Hunter in the challenge round at Paris.

This year, Lott, except for a brief appearance in the final singles matches with Cuba at Detroit, was kept from joining the Davis Cup forces until after his college work at the University of Chicago.

TORONTO BEATS TIGERS.

Toronto, July 22 (A.P.).—The Toronto Leafs, of the International League, defeated the Detroit American League Team, 7-4, in an exhibition game here today. The contest followed the Jersey City-Toronto game.

PEACOCK-DIFFENBAUGH GOLF TEAM TRIUMPHS

Hunters Second in M. A. Play on Course at Indian Spring.

Bureau of Standards Lists Tourney at Sherwood Forest.

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

THE amateur-professional tournament on the course of the Indian Spring Club yesterday afternoon, under the auspices of the Middle Atlantic Professional Golfers' Association, resulted in a victory for Roger Peacock, amateur, and George Diffenbaugh, professional, both of whom are connected with the Indian Spring Club. The best bal was 32—34—66, one stroke better than the card of 33—34—67 turned in by J. Monro Hunter, the Indian Spring golf professional, and his son, J. M. Hunter, while John C. Shorey, amateur, of the Bannockburn Club, and Mel Shorey, his brother, professional at East Potomac Park, captured the third prize with a score of 35—33—68.

Diffenbaugh, who is assistant professional at the Indian Spring Club, was the star performer of the afternoon, his individual card totaling 69, with Peacock helping him on three holes.

Get Birdies on Two of First Three Holes.

He began his round by clipping into the cup from off the green for a birdie 3 on the first hole, repeating this performance on the third hole for another birdie. Then he captured a birdie 4 on the long seventh hole and on the incoming nine he had a birdie 4 on the long sixteenth and a birdie 2 on the seventeenth, his putt on the latter green being fully 20 feet in length. Peacock, who is only in his eighteenth year, and medalist in the recent Congressional Club tournament, helped him with pars on the fourth, twelfth and eighteenth holes. Their best-ball card was as follows:

Out ..... 3 4 3 4 4 3 4 4 3—32
In ..... 4 4 4 4 3 5 4 2 4—34—66

Hunter, father and son, were out in 33, the lad capturing a birdie 3 on the second hole and the father running down a 8-foot putt on the ninth for a birdie 2. With a birdie 3 on the eleventh and a birdie 4 on the sixteenth, both made by Hunter, senior, the pair came home in 34, failing to regain the stroke which they had lost on the first nine.

The cards

Out ..... 4 3 5 4 4 3 4 4 2—33
In ..... 4 3 4 4 3 5 4 3 4—34—67

The Shorey brothers played consistently good golf to finish in third place with 68, but their 35 on the outward journey was due to missed putts. Arthur B. Thorn, professional, and S. M. Leidy, amateur, of the Town and Country Club, were close behind the leaders with a best-ball of 69. The scores were as follows

Roger Peacock, amateur, and George Diffenbaugh, professional, 32—34—66; J. Monro Hunter, jr., amateur, and J. Monro Hunter, sr., amateur and professional (Indian Spring), 33—34—67; John C. Shorey, amateur (Bannockburn), and Mel Shorey, professional (East Potomac Park), 35—33—68; S. M. Leidy, amateur, and Arthur B. Thorn, professional (Town and Country), 36—33—69; William F. DiEste, amateur (Indian Spring), and Walter Hall (Annapolis Roads), 33—37—70; Donald Woodward, amateur, and Fred McLeod, professional (Columbia), 34—37—71; Luther Fiorine, amateur, and Tony Sylvester, professional (Bannockburn), 34—37—71; Dr. L. S. O'Teil, amateur (Indian Spring), and A. L. Houghton, professional (Harper Country Club), 37—35—72; Bruce L. Taylor, jr., amateur, and Sidney C. Moore, professional (Congressional Country Club), 35—37—72; John J. Tierney, jr., amateur, and Archie Clark, professional (Congressional Country Club), 37—37—74; R. N. Jackson, amateur, and James Roche, professional (Elkridge Hunt Club, Baltimore), 38—36—74; A. J. Nixon, amateur, (Congressional), and James Powers, professional, amateur, 36—38—74; Louis Mackall, jr., amateur, and Gene Larkin, professional (Chevy Chase), 37—37—74; Perry B. Hoover, amateur, and George Longe, professional (Indian Spring), 38—37—75; D. F. Mastbrook, amateur (Indian Spring), and Al Treder, professional (Manor), 35—40—75; A. D. Simpson, amateur, and Julius Platte, professional (Forest Green, Baltimore), 38—37—75; Emmert Heitmuller, amateur (Indian Spring), and Charles P. Betschler, professional (Rodger's Forge, Baltimore), 40—36—76; Harry C. Peacock, amateur (Indian Spring), and Warner Mather, professional, unattached, 39—38—77; W. R. Riddell, amateur, and William Schriber, professional (Catoctin, Frederick, Md.), 37—41—78.

The next tournament of the Middle Atlantic Professional Golfers' Association will be an amateur-professional event played next Monday on the Annapolis Roads course.

The championship of the Bureau of Standards will be determined today at a tournament to be played on the Sherwood Forest course. About 70 golfing members of the bureau will journey today to Sherwood Forest to participate in the event.

COLLYER'S COMMENT on the SPORT of KINGS

CANDY PIG.

Well, the old "candy kid" is down hook, line and sinker again today. I said again, because the stable went for $2,500 last time, but Mr. Fronk, whose tonneau is too heavy for his head, wobbled about like a sinker in a teacup, and broke it all up. Now that is putting it mildly. The race on clear dope narrows down to the Archibald representative, GOLD MINT and KING BASIL. The latter is the real old-fashioned sleeper in the race. Ye'wekkum.

ELLICE is another to be taken out of the vat. She goes in the day's opener. I say she goes but as a matter of fact she is last list of also eligibles, hence a doubtful starter. With her out of the way BANNER BRIGHT looks best with SYLVA MEDE right bang up.

The third narrows down to a pretty tight fit between DEDICATE and LAHOR. Yes, and from what I learn overnight both are shooting from taw. You split them out.

GRAND PRINCE, which is a trifle better than rated, is an overnight commission horse. Now this boy Partridge is a heap sight better than a green hand.

I don't look for them to send JEAN VALJEAN back today.

And now we come to another standout. It is none other than GOLDEN PRINCE, which has it on this field of mutts three ways from the jack. They say its the limit.

Over at Bainbridge the boys of "good intentions" are leaving nothing to the imagination. This is the same mob who operated at Jefferson Park, or as Sophie Glutz would say, you have the answer in your lily white mitt. If you want to go against the nuts I will stick and make selections. PATSY H., if he runs to his best form, should tin-can in front of the hash hounds slated to bear colors in the third. Fair sort of hide, and that last effort was just a trifle better than ordinarily rated.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DONORA, $8.04, $4.58, $2.88; HADES, $6.44, $3.62; SATIN'S SPAR, $3.06.

DONORA, favored by the light weight, broke well and, taking a short lead, continued gamely under energetic handling to outfinish HADES. The latter followed in close attendance all the way, but was outfinished. SATIN'S SPAR raced forwardly all the way and had no mishaps. SAM COLE could not improve his position under hard riding.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:49. Off at 2:50. Winner, H. T. Archibald's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JOY ROCK, $18.80, $13.96, $11.80; CHAMP DE MARS, $6.98; $4.18. POLYGAMIA, $4.60.

JOY ROCK, moving into the lead with a rush, easily held sway to the stretch, where he tired and had to be ridden out vigorously to hold race safe. CHAMP DE MARS, a forward factor all the way, finished stoutly. POLYGAMIA, overcoming early interference, saved ground while working her way up and finished fastest of all. LITTLE ASBESTOS raced in close quarters on the inside most of the way. GEORGE GROOM closed some ground.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,800. The Midway Handicap. For 3-year-olds. Start good and fast. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:16. Off at 3:16. Winner, Coldstream Stud's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ESKIMO, $5.36, $3.22, $2.48; JEAN VALJEAN, $3.66, $3.18; DOCTOR PARRISH, $3.56.

ESKIMO, racing close up to the stretch, responded gamely to hard riding and, disposing of DOCTOR PARRISH as the furlong pole, drew out cleverly. JEAN VALJEAN, reserved off the early pace, closed with a rush through the stretch and was going best. DOCTOR PARRISH, hard ridden from the start, moved into a short lead on the inside rounding the end turn, but tired in the final drive. SILVERDALE raced evenly. CLICK stopped badly after showing speed for a half mile.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,400. The Scardale. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:50. Off at 3:54. Winner, Everglade Stable's b. h. (5), by Dodge—Asurita. Trained by J. S. Ward. Value to winner, $1,050; second, $250; third, $150; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:48 2-5, 1:13, 1:38, 1:44 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DUNMORE, $6.90, $4.08, $3.24; LANE ALLEN, $3.72, $2.90; DEVON, $4.84.

DUNMORE, racing in suddenly improved form, was far out of it until reaching the stretch, where he moved up fast on the outside and, overhauling leaders, drew out under hard riding. LANE ALLEN, reserved close up while racing on the inside, took a brief lead in the stretch, but could not withstand the winner. DEVON closed stoutly. LONGRIDGE tired badly after showing the most speed in the pacemaking.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,500. The Belle Meade. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:17. Off at 4:18. Winner, E. R. Bradley's ch. f. (3), by North Star III—Bandello. Trained by W. Hurley. Value to winner, $1,050; second, $281.50; third, $171.50; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:49 1-5, 1:14, 1:38 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BEAMING OVER, $12.52, $8.02, $5.54; PORT HARLEM, $7.06, $6.08; NEARBY, $6.76.

BEAMING OVER, well ridden, was rated off the early pace, then moved up stoutly in the stretch and, taking command, drew out handily. PORT HARLEM, displaying speed in pacemaking, held on well after being headed to save the place.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward, fillies. Start poor. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:49. Off at 4:51. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALAYER, $36.58, $17.52, 10.04; OTILLA, $9.28, $6.28; GRIFF W., $6.44.

ALAYER, rated close up for a half mile, took command and, continuing well under hard riding, just lasted. OTILLA, knocked back repeatedly, closed with a rush through the stretch and finished as if best. GRIFF W. raced prominently to the stretch where, after losing ground, finished well. MONICA NORINE tired. SHARON closed a gap. AERONAUTA quit after showing speed for a half mile. RED FACE was left.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start poor. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:25. Off at 5:34. Winner, J. Spencer's ch. g. CONFERENCE MEETS OPEN TODAY

Events at Rosedale Playground Lead to City Finals.

THE conference meets beginning today on the Rosedale Playground, where the Eastern Conference championships will be decided, brings the Municipal playground department's summer track program to a high point of intreest.

The first week in July was devoted to organization work and the second saw the start of the dual and triangular events. Now starts the conference games in which sectional champions will be named and the various playground coaches given an opportunity to size up their squads against ten or twelve teams.

Entrants May Compete in More Than One Event.

In the conference games the same events are run off as in the city championship meet and under the same rules, with the sole exception of the rule governing the number of events in which each boy can compete. In the conference engagements a boy may compete in as many events as he chooses in his own class, but in the city finals he is limited to enter only one event.

In the conference meets, winners of first, second and third places and those on the scoring relay teams each receive a red, white and blue striped ribbon, known as a conference stripe. In the city finals the winners are awarded The Washington Post medals, emblematic of the city playground championship.

Three Other Conference Meets This Week.

Following the meet at Rosedale today, the Midcity conference meet at Plaza, the Southeast conference games at Virginia Avenue and the Northern conference championships at Iowa Avenue, will be held on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, respectively. All meets this week will start at 2:30 o'clock and will be under the supervision of the playground directors.

RED CROSS VICTOR.

The Red Cross Nine of St. Elizabeths Hospital yesterday defeated the Metropolitan Police Team, 10 to 1. Thompson held the Policemen to six hits. Davis led the winning attack with a triple and two singles in four trips out.

6-CLUB RACE FOR LEAGUE HONORS

Teams are Grouped At Top in Unlimited Section.

ROUNDING the far turn with the stretch drive ahead, six of the nine surviving entries in the Capital City League unlimited section race, are preparing for the most sensational championship duel the amateur circuit has ever witnessed. As the respective managers prepare to jockey their clubs through the final test, only one and one-half lengths separate the leader from the sixth place contender.

Hawk's Lead Too Slight For Much Comfort.

Only two of the teams might be rated out of the race. A brisk sprint by any one of the seven top teams would carry the strong finisher to the wire a winner.

Today the Brentwood Hawks led by a nose over the Miller Aztecs, with the National Press Building Cardinals in third position, just one-half game behind the pacemakers. Close at hand are the Auths and Dixie Pigs, tied for fourth place and a single game behind the leaders. The St. Joseph A. C., in fifth place, is a game and one-half to the rear of the Hawks, and the Brown's Cornermen, one of the three teams below the .500 mark, is still rated a contender with eleven games ahead.

With few exceptions the teams have completed their first round engagements and several started on their final round last Sunday. The Tremonts and Edmonds Art Stonemen were greatly outdistanced for the first half, but neither can be rated a "soft spot" as demonstrated by both in recent engagements.

The ultimate victor will have a rough road to travel before the laurels are awarded in September. The results of one day's games may carry a third or fourth place team into the lead and drop the leaders near the bottom of the first division. Every game means much to the rival nines at this stage of the race.

Teams Given Chance to Sign Players by August 15.

Upsets and heated battles have marked the race thus far. At no time has any one team had a lead of more than a single game.

The gruelling race has taken its toll. Several of the teams have encountered internal strife and several have lost the services of players within the past week which would prove mighty valuable in the swift race ahead.

At the request of a number of the team pilots, the league officials have decided to permit teams to sign additional players until August 15. The 5-day eligibility rule will be enforced, however. No player will be eligible to compete until his contract has been on file five days. No additional players may be signed after midnight of August 15.

Legion Nines Booked For 2 Week-Day Games

Four teams seeking the second half championship of the American Legion series will go into action tomorrow and Thursday.

Lincoln and Delano Post Nines will clash tomorrow at 5 o'clock on No. 3 diamond. Victory and George Washington Teams are carded to meet Thursday at 5 o'clock on a diamond to be named later.

The outcome of these contests will have an important bearing on the race. Delano and George Washington lead at present with a win each. Victory and Lincoln have divided in two games.

First Mail Pilot Talks Over Radio

Lee Will Complete His Millionth Mile in Flying to Chicago to Broadcast in "Roads of the Sky" at 6 P. M.

The absence of static was gratifying to radio listeners last night. Distant stations did not seem so strong as usual, but reception was clear.

The first air mail pilot in America, E. Hamilton Lee, who led the first group of "flying postmen" to take the air on the original New York to Washington route, will complete his millionth mile of flying to reach the Chicago studios of the National Broadcasting Co. to address a nation-wide audience as speaker in the broadcast "Roads of the Sky" at 6 o'clock. "Flying the Mail; Chicago to Salt Lake" will be the subject of his talk, which will contain thrilling details of his fifteen years' experience at the controls of a plane.

Although only 35 years old, Lee has been a member of the air mail service since 1918, the year of its birth. As a barnstorming stunt flier he thrilled the crowds of 1913 with circus stuff, and during the war he was an army instructor of aerial acrobatics.

He was a prize-winner in the 1927 New York-Spokane national air races, and he is the holder of several speed records in flying air mail. He has spent more than 8,000 hours in the air.

The augmented Eveready Hour Orchestra will broadcast a program of popular dance music and light orchestral selections, interspersed with numbers by the New Yorkers' Male Quartet. Caroline Andrews, soprano, will be an added feature.

The quartet will sing "Louise," "Some Sweet Day" and "Don't Keep Me in the Dark, Bright Eyes." Miss Andrews has selected the "Moon Song" from "The Mikado," "Angels Serenade" and "Lo, Hear the Gentle Lark," for her contributions.

"Musical Typwriter," a novelty composition by Harry Reser, will be played during the half-hour broadcast of dace tunes by the Eskimos at 9 o'clock.

A mixed quartet of Italian singers, headed by Giuseppe di Benedetto, tenor, assisted by a mandolin quartet and a concert orchestra, will present "Neopolitan Nights" at 10 o'clock from WRC.

The dance orchestra to be heard from 11 o'clock until midnight has arranged to play "Now I'm in Love," "The World's Greatest Sweetheart Is You," "In a Great Big Way," "Am I Blue?" "The One in the World," "A Kiss in the Dark" and "Jericho."

A program opening with "The Washington Post March," by Sousa, and ranging from the wistful 'Smilin' Through," by Penn, through the pastoral "Whistling Farmer Boy," to "My Maryland," the old German folk song set to a swinging march rythm, and "Dance of the Paper Dolls," a present-day popular tune, will be heard during the concert by the Pure Oil Band, directed by Edwin Franko Goldman, from WJZ and WBAL at 7 o'clock.

A group of waltz melodies will be included in the Fada program. David Mendoza conducting, over WMAL at 9 o'clock. Mendoza will also include the first tango of his revival of famous airs—"Jealouse." Other offerings will be the "Fledermaus" overture, a fantasie on "Suwanee," and the "Espana" of Charbrier, ending with the conductor's own "Close of Day." Arthur Hackett, American tenor, will be the guest soloist.

The Old Gold-Paul Whiteman Hour will be heard between 8 and 9 o'clock from Universal City, Calif., in a typical program.

Sergei Kotlarsky, Russian violinist, will present a group of classical compositions in the joint recital that he will broadcast with Mathilde Harding over WMAL at 7 o'clock. Mr. Kotlarsky's first contribution will be the andante movement from Lalo's "Spanish Symphony" and he will next be heard in an arrangement by Franko of Bach's "Ariso" and Moszkowski's "Guitarre." He will conclude his recital with Auer's arrangement by Tschaikowsky's "Air de Lensky" and Mozart's "Rondo." Miss Harding will entertain with Chaminade's "Scarf Dance" and with a piano solo by Durande, entitled "Chaconne."

Estelle Hunt Deane, soprano, will be heard in a short recital from WOL at 7:30 o'clock this evening. This program will be preceded by dinner music and the "Amos 'n' Andy" feature.

WJSV will be on the air from 6:30 to 10:45 o'clock, presenting a varied program. Joseph Dimeglio, tenor, and Everett Stevens, boy pianist, are among the features.

Tales of the Round Table

AFTER Owain returned to King Arthur's court, he forgot his promise to the Lady of the Fountain. Instead of remaining away for three months, he stayed at Camelot for three years. Then one day a maiden on horseback came to him and said:

"You are a faithless traitor! You have broken your promise to return to the Lady of the Fountain!"

So limp was he that he seemed dead.

With these words, she turned and galloped away

Owain felt that he deserved the reproach. The next day he left the court and wandered away. He did not know that he would find the Lady of the Fountain——he hardly knew what would happen to him.

Wandering to strange lands, Owain became weak with hunger and at last fell faint to the ground. In this condition he was spied by a lady and her maids. He seemed as if dead, but by kind treatment was revived.

The lady provided him with armor and a horse, and he went on his way. As he was passing near a cave, he heard a groan. He listened, and there came another cry of pain.

"Who are you, and what is the trouble?" called Owain.

"I am the handmaiden of the Lady of the Mountain," was the reply, "and I have been imprisoned here. Two of the Lady's friends told her that Owain would never return, but I spoke for him and said that I was sure he would return. Then they placed me here, and tomorrow I am to be put to death unless Owain returns."

Owain did not tell her his name, but he remained at the spot until the next day. Then two armed men appeared on horseback, and they told him that they came to take the maiden to be burned at the stake. Owain opposed them both, and vanquished them.

In company with the handmaiden, Owain went to the castle. The Lady of the Fountain forgave him, and until her death the knight remained with her—always meeting success in defense of the fountain

TODAY'S WOMEN

By EARL MINDERMAN

JULY 23.

FLORENCE VIDOR, the famous star of the silver screen who married Jascha Heifitz, the great violinist, was born this day, 1895, in Houston Tex. She had previously been married to King Vidor, the well-known director, whom she met when he came to Houston to make a picture there. While visiting Corinne Griffith at the Vitagraph Studio, Mrs. Vidor attracted the attention of Vitagraph executives who persuaded her to accept a contract.

Her success was rapid. Among the pictures in which the star has appeared are "The Real Adventure," "Woman Wake Up," "Dusk to Dawn," "Alice Adams," "Conquering the Woman," "The Mirage," "Borrowed Husbands" and "The Flaming Forties."

Charlotte Cushman, one of the greatest American tragic actresses of the nineteenth century, was born this day, 1816. On her last appearance in 1874 she was presented with a laurel wreath by a group of prominent citizens of New York headed by William Cullen Bryant.

Mrs. Florence Guertin Tuttle, American author, was born this day, 1869.

Radio Firm Gets Woman Vice Consul

Miss Field, at Amsterdam Since 1925, to Labor in Research Division of N. B. C. Sales Promotion Department.

Miss Pattie Field, first woman to hold a vice consularship in the service of the United States, has resigned that post to accept a position with the National Broadcasting Co.

At the time of her resignation from the foreign service, Miss Field was vice consul to Amsterdam, Holland, a post she had occupied almost since her admission to the service in 1925. Her new place is in the industrial research division of the sales promotion department of the NBC.

Miss Field, a native of Denver, was the second woman to be appointed to the Foreign Consular Service. Miss Lucille Atcherson passed the test three years earlier, and was placed in the Diplomatic Corps. She served as diplomatic secretary at Berne, Switzerland, almost until her resignation was submitted because of her approaching marriage.

The precedent established by Miss Field and Miss Atcherson has since been followed by other women. There is feminine representation now at practically every examination held, and at present there are four women in the foreign service, records show.

In retiring from the field she pioneered, the first woman vice consul expressed gratitude that other women are carrying on the work she started.

In her new position, Miss Field will have an opportunity to take advantage of her training while abroad. Much of the work she handled during her three and a half years in Holland had to do with industrial research and investigations, she said.

Miss Field deserted the calling in which she had struggled so hard for recognition because, as she put it, "radio is a young industry, presenting almost unlimited possibilities for young people."

Her entry into broadcasting was much more easily accomplished than her beginning in diplomatic circles, according to her story. Her good nature in permitting approximately 60 would-be male diplomats to remove their coats during study period was an important factor in making possible her start as a diplomat.

The coat incident occurred after Miss Field had graduated from Radcliffe, failed in an earlier examination for the service and had studied political science for a year in the Paris Ecole de Science Politique. She applied to Angus Crawford, head of the Washington School of Political Science. Only men had studied in the school before and Mr. Crawford was dubious. At last he consented to put the problem before his pupils, who agreed to Miss Field's joining the class on the understanding that they be permitted to remove their coats as they worked.

Miss Field decided upon a career in the diplomatic service during her college days. A casual remark in the family circle led to a declaration by her brother, James Field, that "women couldn't succeed in that line." This fired the young woman with determination to try her hand in this calling that was so difficult.

Although she was barely out of her teens the girl threw herself fully into the business of preparing for her big test, and was not deterred by the failure in her first examination.

Miss Field was only 24 years old when she was accepted into the foreign service, the only woman among the group of seventeen from the class of sixty who passed the examination.

She is now 28 and brings to radio all the personality and perseverance that enabled her to undergo the rigors of schooling necessary for her diplomatic success.

The young woman first became interested in radio as a career during a two months' holiday in the United States which began last March. A few days after she opened negotiations with the NBC, she received word from Washington that she would return to her position in Amsterdam with a higher rank and an increase in salary.

"Word of my promotion caused me to think long and hard about severing my connection with the work I had come to love, but the future possibilities of radio proved too alluring and I decided to resign," she said.

"Besides I had already helped blaze the trail for women in the foreign service and the NBC post offered me something that women hadn't attempted before."

Miss Field is a daughter of the late E. B. Field, jr., who, until his death ten years ago, was vice president of the Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph Co., with headquarters in Denver.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

WHY PEOPLE GO TO WAR.

WITHIN the lifetime of persons now living there will be a war which will make the World War look like a side show. The overcrowded people will whip, and then they will draw up a peace treaty of which the predominant feature will be unrestricted emigration from any land to any land, with full rights and privileges for the immigrant.

As tragic as appears this prophecy, it is only a curtain raiser for the final scene in the great drama of humans on earth. This is a prediction made somewhat frequently by students of world population. It is based upon the Malthusian doctrine. However, something always comes up to interfere with the working of the Malthusian principles. When Malthus advanced his doctrine it seemed irrefutable. Then America was discovered. The opening up of the agricultural and mineral resources of the new continent caused men to forget Malthus and his writings. As this continent approaches the exhaustion of its material resources the Malthusian doctrine again comes to the fore.

A week long symposium on "Problems of Population" was recently held at the University of Chicago. One of the speakers was Dr. R. R. Kuczinski. This speaker agreed with the Malthusian doctrine, but he thought that the end would be much slower in coming about than most population experts think, and he even suggested some ways of escape.

He thinks population is increasing, but more slowly than in the common opinion. Furthermore, so far as Europe, America, and Australia are concerned, the increase is destined to slow up markedly. The present excess of births over deaths is largely because of the high population of women of child-bearing age. This proportion is dropping rapidly.

In consequence, before long, in these three regions births will be less than deaths. The Anglo-Saxons, Teutons, Scandinavians, and Roman races will be seen to be dying out before long. The dominant race in the next period will be the Slavic people. However, they will shortly be overrun by the Mongolians or Asiatics. These groups will have the stage when the final curtain goes down. The Russian is not scheduled to overrun the world, as some think.

Just now he has a high population increase, but that is because so large a proportion of the population is now in the child-bearing age. There are almost no people over 50 years of age in Russia. However, their death rate is falling rapidly and presently they will have a large old age population.

The hope that he can see for the Anglo-Saxons, Teutons, Scandinavians and Romans is that the Orientals and Slavs may learn birth control before it is too late. Finally, we may escape the Malthusian ending through discovery of something or other—something more important even than the discovery of America.

PERMANENT OR LIFT BRIDGE.

Uncertain writes: Which would you suggest, permanent or removable bridge work?

Do you think it depends on the condition of the mouth and teeth of the individual?

I went to two dentists and they differ on my case. One suggests a permanent and the other a removable bridge. What would you suggest?

REPLY.

Other things being equal, removable bridge work is better because it permits the mouth to be kept cleaner.

But which is better suited to a given case is a question which can not be properly answered by a person who does not know the conditions in that mouth.

Pohanka to Address Round Table.

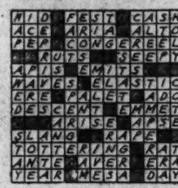
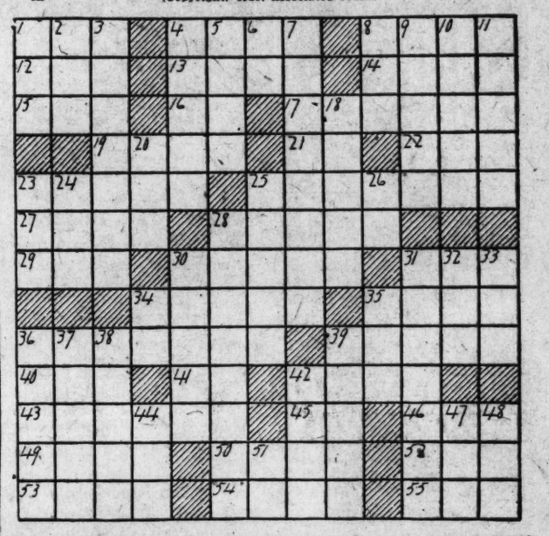
YESTERDAY'S ANSWER



(Copyright, 1929, Associated Press.)



What Today Means to You

JULY 23

By MARY BLAKE

IF July 23 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 6 a. m. to 7:30 a. m., from 4 p. m. to 5 p. m., and from 11 p. m. to 12 midnight. The darker periods are from 11 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., and from 8 p. m. to 9:15 p. m.

Much happiness, peace of mind, and contentment is indicated on this day by the astrological signs. No business advancement is prognosticated, and it would be advisable to defer to some later date any new developments. Family life promises to be redolent of harmony, and new social ties will possibly be formed.

Patience and evenness of disposition will characterize children born on this day. They will be patient and slow both in work and speech. They will not probably attain any spectacular success but those with whom they associate will feel all the better for having known them.

Your temperament is a restless one, and you have a roving disposition. Anything that savors of an obligation becomes irksome to you and your main desire is freedom of action and expression. When, however, this desideratum is attained, you quickly become bored. Very little satisfaction will be got by you out of life until you force yourself to concentrate on something worth while. Travel is clearly marked out for you and, although this will naturally appeal to one with your proclivities, just as soon as it becomes a necessary part of your existence, you will become "fed up" with it.

Problems, difficult of solution, always fascinate you, and it is possible that in some such field of endeavor, if you would only stick at it, your eventual success might be compassed. You are at all times a cheerful companion, quite versatile and amusing. You do not take life very seriously and are always unwilling to accept, or assume, responsibilities. Your affections will never involve you in trouble or disappointment. They leave little trace—and never a scar—on your emotions.

The signs denote that your very indifference to success may give you more of it than you really deserve. If this should be so, it will never change your disposition, nor will it rob you of your democratic charm.

Successful people born July 23:

Henry G. Reed—Manufacturer.
Charlotte S. Cushman—Actress.
William R. Travers—Lawyer.
James Gibbons—Second Cardinal in the United States.
Arthur Bird—Composer.
Albert Shaw—Journalist.

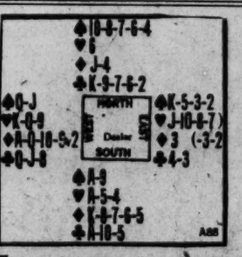
AUCTION BRIDGE



THE above deal was played at Auction Bridge; the bidding was: South one No Trump, West double, North pass, East two Hearts; South pass, West pass, North two Spades, East three Hearts which obtained the contract.

The Contract bidding doubtless would have been: South one No Trump, West double, North pass, East three Hearts; South pass, West four Hearts which would have obtained the contract.

South's original opening was the Ace of Spades, followed by the Nine to trick 2 which West (dummy) won and led the King of trumps. South won the first round of trumps and, as it looked as if his only chance to save game was by taking in two Club tricks, he led the Ace of Clubs to trick 4. North played the Nine, making the loudest "come-on" signal that he could. South led a second Club which North won, and the adversaries saved the game.

Could you have done better?

THE ANSWER.

Before playing to trick 2, the Declarer (East) could foresee what must happen if he permitted his dummy to win that trick. With one trick already lost and with the adverse Ace of trumps a sure loser, the Declarer can not afford to lose two Club tricks. His only chance for discarding a Club is by risking the Diamond finesse in dummy, and he must take that risk before he leads trumps. He should win the second Spade in closed hand, overtaking his partner's Queen with the King; lead the single Diamond from closed hand and play the Queen from Dummy. As the finesse wins, he then can lead the Ace of Diamonds and discard a Club. After that he will proceed to get out the trumps; but as the adversaries can take only one trump and one Club, game will be made.

TENT WOMAN WINS IN FIRST SKIRMISH OVER LAND LEASE

Judge Holds She Can End Agreement With Garage by Notice.

CAMP SITE NOT INCLUDED IN SILVER SPRING CASE

Action Taken by Doctor to Repossess Loss in Boom.

Dr. Anne Bartsch Dunne, 2701 Connecticut avenue northwest, last night won the opening skirmish in her campaign to recover possession of the valuable tract of land at the intersection of the Colesville pike and the Brookeville road, Silver Spring, Md., which she had leased to the Maryland Garage & Machine Co. Two weeks ago the doctor astonished Silver Spring by pitching a tent on the disputed property and formally taking possession.

Justice of the Peace Charles Clark held that the terms of the lease gave Dr. Dunne the right to terminate the lease, by giving 30 days notice, on all of the property bordering the two roads, with the exception of a small tract about 75 by 75 feet on which she had erected the tent. The section on which she is camping was specially excluded from the property named in the suit to recover possession which was heard last night.

The hearing was held in the county building at Silver Spring and a view of the disputed property could be had by looking out of the window. In fact, at one time in the cross examination, Attorney Joseph C. Cissel, counsel for the garage company, asked the doctor to go to the window and point out the part of the tract which was in dispute.

Values Go Up.

Dr. Dunne did not attempt to recover possession of the land back of the front sections, where there is a house, but through her attorney, George H. Lamar, of Rockville, contended that she had a perfect right to terminate the lease and accept the opportunity of taking advantages of the boom in Silver Spring property values. Attorney Lamar pointed out that a tract adjoining the disputed land brought $100,000 recently and declared that no law of reason would compel his client to pass up such a chance in view of the fact that the lease gave her specific rights to terminate by giving 30 days notice in writing.

Attorney Cissel declared that to give her possession of the outside property would bottle his clients in where they could only gain ingress and egress by an airship. Dr. Dunne and Attorney Lamar both declared that they had not had the intention of refusing a method of ingress and egress to the garage company, but it was part of the plan to dedicate a street which would give them such entrance. Cissel declared that their spoken word was no assurance that the doctor would not sell the property and thus abandon all right to make such a compromise.

The property on which the doctor has pitched her tent, and which was not included in the property named at the hearing, was leased by a separate instrument and the doctor claimed that she had the right to repossess by taking possession. This was why she moved her tent on the property. This tiny section probably is the most valuable section of the whole property. It has been declared an ideal location for a gasoline filling station and it was for this purpose that the garage company had leased the ground.

Garageman Not On Stand.

Cissel did not place Alan Neumann, president, and David Mears, secretary-treasurer, of the garage company, on the stand, but declared that the defense was willing to stand on the terms of the lease. He declared that the terms of the lease were "so carefully and so ingeniously drawn" that the judge as a layman would not be able to appreciate the legal nuances.

He, therefore, based his plea on the argument that common sense interpretation of the law would result in a verdict for the defense inasmuch as all of the advantages had been taken by the lessor. He denied that he had acquiesced in the signing of the lease but declared that he had advised his clients not to sign it.

Cissel announced to the court that he desired to protect the rights of his clients to appeal to the circuit court but did not definitely file the appeal motion. Inasmuch as the tract on which the tent is erected is the section which his clients desire most of all it is presumed that his attack will come in connection with this parcel and the occupation of the land by the doctor.

The hearing was marked throughout by sharp clashes between counsel for the opposing sides, both of whom are leading lights of the Rockville bar.

Danville Child Injured By Police Head's Auto

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, July 22.—Anne Stigall, 6-year-old daughter of L. P. Stigall, is in a local hospital with possibly a fractured skull, after being run over by an automobile driven by Police Commissioner A. C. Conway. No charges were preferred as officers after examining eyewitnesses held Conway was not responsible.

The commissioner swerved his car so violently to avoid striking two small children who ran into the street, that his car plunged on to the sidewalk and a wheel passed over the head of the Stigall child. The young daughter of W. E. Rice, one of the two Conway sought to avoid striking, was knocked down and bruised. Conway took both victims to the hospital where the Stigall child remains unconscious.

Mrs. Sarah Alderton Dies in Cumberland

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., July 22.—Mrs. Sarah Ellen Alderton, 57, wife of Harry Alderton, of Oldtown, died yesterday at Western Maryland Hospital. The survivors include one son, Harry W. Alderton, of Oldtown, and two daughters, Mrs. Bertha Crites, of Oldtown, and Mrs. James Carroll, of Baltimore. She also leaves the following brothers and sisters: Marshall, Jesse, Crawford, Jack and Benjamin Edwards, all of Philadelphia; Robert Edwards, of Clearfield, Pa., and David Edwards, of Lamberville, Pa., and Mrs. Jennie Derian and Mrs. Grant Robertson, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Bertha Hoffman, of Darby, Pa.

4-H DELEGATES GO TO SUMMER MEET

V. P. I. Annual Short Course Attracts Virginia Members.

STATE HEAD TO ATTEND

Harrisonburg, Va., July 22.—Rockingham's 4-H Club delegation of 42 members left here today for Blacksburg to attend the annual short course held at V. P. I. In the party was Victor Myers, of Dayton, president of the State 4-H Club organization.

County Agent Charles M. Cox and Miss Josephine Fultz, assistant home demonstration agent, were in charge of the party, which represented all of the dozen 4-H clubs in Rockingham County.

In the party also was Earl Zigler, leader of the Timberville Club, who attends the short course as the winner of the Southern Planter Scholarship for the outstanding club leader in Virginia who once was a club member.

Three demonstration teams, competing for State honors and trips to Camp Vail, Mass., also were included in the Rockingham party.

Purcellville, Va., July 22.—The following 4-H Club girls of Loudoun County left this morning for Blacksburg, where they will attend the meetings held in connection with the State Farmers Institute and Homemakers' meeting: Misses Ruby Cooper, Lillian Hope and Virginia Frye, Lucketts; Carolyn Caviness and Edna Carr, Leesburg; Geraldine Potts and Clara Conard, Hillsboro; Annette Titus and Harriet Taylor, Lincoln; Ruth Gilbert, Aldie; Mildred Weadon, Waterford; Betty Ferguson and Dorothy Dawson, Middleburg. The girls were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Cummins and Miss Bertha Potts, Hillsboro. Mrs. Cummins will serve as club leader.

Young People End Parley in Virginia

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 22.—The Presbyterian Young People's conference at the Massanetta Springs summer Bible conference encampment closed tonight with the election of James Crinkley, Blackstone, Va., president; James Sydnor, Charles Town, W. Va., vice president, and Miss Mary Rogers, Richmond, secretary for the 1930 session.

More than 550 young men and women attended the week's sessions from all parts of the Presbyterian Synod of Virginia. The Rev. Dwight M. Chalmers, of Charlottesville, and the Rev. Edward Miles, of Lynchburg, were the principal speakers during the conference.

The next conference of the Massanetta program is that of the Woman's Auxiliary Training School, which opens Wednesday.

Overbrook Farm Cow Wins Honors

Testing Results in Loudoun County Announced by Association.

Special to The Washington Post.

Leesburg, Va., July 22.—In Loudoun Valley Cow-Testing Association No. 1, Overbrook Farm No. 1, won both high herd and high individual production honors last month. Their herd of grade Holsteins, Jerseys and Guernseys averaged 964 pounds of milk and 39.8 pounds of butterfat. Martha, jr., a grade Holstein, produced 1,931 pounds of milk and 84 pounds of butterfat.

In Loudoun Valley No. 2, the herd of grade Guernseys and Holsteins owned by H. C. Rogers won high herd honors. A grade Holstein owned by Ophir Farm was the high cow.

In Loudoun Valley No. 3, the high herd for the month was owned by Webster Kirkpatrick, with an average production of 37.6 pounds of fat. The high cow was a registered Guernsey owned by Sterling Farm, with a production of 1,281 pounds of milk and 75.6 pounds of butterfat.

VIRGINIA ORCHARDS SHIP EARLY PEACHES

Bulk of Movement Expected to Come First Week in August.

BUMPER CROP IS SEEN

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 22.—With the early varieties already moving to Northern and Eastern markets, Timberville peach growers are looking forward to the first week in August, when the big part of their prospective bumper crop begins to move in earnest. Picking and shipping already has been started by many orchards, but the first of the major varieties, the Hiley Belles, will not start moving until August 5.

Due to the favorable growing season, the peach season this year will be ten days earlier than usual, putting the Elberta season, the principal variety, around August 15.

Despite the record yield of around 450 carloads—making the Timberville section the principal peach growing area in Virginia—the orchardists look for most favorable prices. Due to the failure of the Georgia crop, the market is said to be higher than a year ago and buyers are reported plentiful.

The peach growers also are encouraged by the emergency order of the Virginia State Corporation Commission requiring the Southern Railway to provide adequate sidetrack facilities for loading. As the peach crop has to be moved at top speed on account of the perishable nature of the fruit, the growers had anticipated heavy losses on account of the present inadequate shipping facilities, but with the commission's order for an additional sidetrack, they hope to move the record crop in speedy fashion. The present track provides loading facilities for only fourteen cars, which is said to be totally inadequate for the new siding, which they hope will be completed by the time the peach season reaches its height.

Timberville apple growers also look for a very good crop, about 75 per cent of the yield of a year ago. The apples promise to be larger, and thus grade higher than they did a year ago. Early indications were for only a 50 per cent crop.

New Produce Concern To Aid Farm Industry

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., July 22.—With the avowed purpose of securing for farmers of this region better prices for their poultry and eggs, and thereby building up that branch of the farming industry, a new company has been formed in Charlottesville to be known as the Monticello Produce Co., Inc.

The new concern has purchased the D. B. Weaver Produce Co. and Mr. Weaver has been made a stockholder, director and sales manager. A. F. Howard is president and C. Nelson Beck is general manager. Other stockholders and directors, are S. A. Jessup, E. G. Lee and C. L. Stahl, of the Monticello Dairy, Inc., and Lemuel F. Smith and C. Nelson Beck.

Virginia Spindles Work 131,681,000 Hours

Richmond, Va., July 22 (A.P.).—Of a total of 709,054 spindles in place in Virginia June 30, 679,254 were active during the month for a total of 131,681,814 spindle hours, according to Department of Commerce figures released here. The average number of active hours for each spindle in place was 186.

The average number of active spindle hours for the United States was 232 for the month; for the cotton-growing States, 294; for New England States, 160; for all other States, 172.

CUMBERLAND PLANS 12TH ANNUAL FAIR

Many Innovations Promised for Event to Take Place on New Ground.

2,000 WILL PERFORM

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., July 22.—Things are shaping rapidly for the twelfth annual Cumberland Fair to be held at the $250,000 plant at Fairgo, on the McMullen highway. There will be six days of entertainment from August 26 to 31. It will mark the opening of the fall racing season in Maryland.

Special attention is being given to the agricultural, horticultural, live stock, poultry, pet stock and handicraft departments by General Manager Harry A. Manley, who has been in charge for three years past and has seen the exhibition grow into large proportions.

Troop F, Third United States Cavalry, will be here again to give exhibitions, afternoon and night. The great riding and drill exhibitions of this famous troop have been features of the recent Cumberland fairs and thousands attend to see this prize troop.

Horses are already arriving for the race card and at least 250 will be in the stables when the bugle sounds for the first race.

The Cumberland Jockey Club will open its new club house in the paddock this year. Other additions have been made to the grounds which, bounded by the Potomac River and surrounded by mountains, are claimed to be the "most beautiful fair grounds in America."

Cattle, Ralph F. McHenry.
Swine and sheep, H. P. Miller.
Corn, Ira V. McKenzie.
Agriculture, A. W. Frazee, Albert O'Neill, Charles S. Drake.
Vegetables, H. C. Gillum, E. T. Korns.
Florticulture, Mrs. Buckner, F. F. Scott, Harold R. Smith, Miss Emma Sloan, of Lonaconing; Mrs Abbott R. Walker, of Frostburg; A. F. Beck, of Piedmont; Charles I Smith and Webster K. Edwards.
Potatoes, Ira V. McKenzie.
Fruit, Douglas P. LeFevre, R. H Stubbs, Dr. Henry M. Hodgson, R. T. Powell, Espy Growden.
Household department, Maude A. Bean, county demonstration agent.
4-H girls department, Maude A. Mean.
Poultry and pigeon department, Reatus L. Spiker, C. A. Smith, C. W. Webster.

Woman Observes 78th Birthday at Reunion

Special to The Washington Post.

Frostburg, Md., July 22.—Mrs. Mary Ann Hitchins, of Carlos, celebrated her seventy-eighth birthday yesterday with a family reunion at Junior Order Park, with about 100 persons in attendance, and Mrs. Rebecca Workman, 90, a relative, of Lonaconing, a center of interest. Mrs. Hitchins, the widow of James Hitchins, has 5 sons, 3 daughters, 23 grandchildren and 8 great-grandchildren.

The program included speaking and games with dinner at 6 o'clock. The committee in charge was composed of Harry Stevens, chairman; former Postmaster Ulysses Hanna and Eugene Stevens. Mrs. Hitchins is a daughter of the late Harry Stevens. She has one sister, Mrs. Kate Koontz, of Mount Savage.

Heart Trouble Fatal To Chestertown Man

Special to The Washington Post.

Chestertown, Md., July 22.—William T. Duyer, 60, junior member of the building and contracting firm of Duyer Bros., of this city, died early this morning in Easton Emergency Hospital following an illness of several months from heart trouble. He was one of the most prominent sportsmen in Kent County and was noted for his prowess as a duck hunter. Besides his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Margaret Bakefey, he is survived by two brothers, Frank and Lawrence Duyer, both of this city; two sisters, Misses Belle and Elizabeth Duyer, both of Baltimore, and a son, Albert, of Baltimore. No arrangements have been made for the funeral.

Minister's Wife Ends Life With Gun, Report

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., July 22. The suicide of Mrs. Stikes, wife of a Baptist minister assigned to a remote section of Brayson County in the Blue Ridge foothills, was reported today. There was uncertainty about her initials. She is said to have ordered her five children into the yard and to have locked herself in a room and then shot herself through the head with a revolver. The children ran and told their father, who found her dead. No reason was assigned.

MARYLAND BAPTIST ASSEMBLY CLOSES

500 ATTEND MEETING

Special to The Washington Post.

Frederick, Md., July 22.—Following sessions of ten days the thirteenth annual Maryland Baptist Assembly at Braddock Heights adjourned last night. Mrs. W. L. Blankenship, of Atlanta, Ga., delivered the final address, and Miss Alice Biby, of Nashville, Tenn., representing the Sunday school board of the Southern Baptist convention and head of the intermediate department of the Sunday school conference, led the final morning session of the assembly.

The last afternoon was given to examinations of many of those who had taken the different courses and recreation. Awards will be made later to those passing the examinations.

Following a session of the Woman's Missionary Union, a lecture on lesson construction, a session of the church administration and pastors' Bible conference, those at the head of these departments left for home.

The Rev. Dr. Thomas Joseph Watts, field representative of the Baptist ministerial relief board, of Dallas, Tex., preached at the yesterday morning service in the First Baptist Church, the Rev. William C. Royal, pastor. After the service he left for Ridgecrest, N. C., before returning to Dallas.

Among those who left for their homes after the final sessions were the Rev. Dr. Bernard W. Spilman, of Kinston, N. C., representing the Sunday school board of the Southern Baptist convention, who has been obtained as one of the leading lecturers for next year; the Rev. Francis Harvey Green, of Pennington, N. J.; the Rev. Dr. W. Hershey Davis, of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, of Louisville; W. Powell Hale, lecturer, of Jefferson City, Tenn.; the Rev. Cecil Perry and the Rev. C. T. Vinzant, of Louisville, both special Sunday school and Young People's Baptist Union leaders; the Rev. W. Clyde Atkins, pastor of Catonsville Baptist Church; the Rev. W. Rush Lovin, pastor of Spurgeon Memorial Baptist Church, of Norfolk; the Rev Robert E. F. Aler, pastor of Larchmont Baptist Church, of Norfolk; Mrs. S. R. Barnes, director of the Woman's Missionary Union conference; Miss Margaret Chapin, of Washington, representing the Woman's Missionary Union of the Southern Baptist convention; Mrs. C. D. Creasman, junior Sunday school specialist and director of the pageant.

The final registration reached the 500 mark, more than 150 beyond the peak of last year.

A new plan under consideration for next year is a week-end program for Sunday schools and Bible class groups. If it is adopted the 1930 assembly will open with the Young People's Baptist Union and close with the Sunday school and Bible classes program.

Farmers to Get Advice on Water

V. P. I. Engineer Will Assist Agricultural Interests of Albemarle.

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., July 22.—Farm people living in Albemarle County will secure the services of an agricultural engineer from the extension division, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, to assist them in determining the most practical water system for their needs.

The farm agent, T. O. Scott, of this city, and Mrs. Bessie Dunn Miller, of Free Union, have been active in securing this service.

A complete survey, using accurate instruments, will be made on each farm whose owner requests the service and definite recommendations will be made as to the proper system to install.

This service will be free to Albemarle County farmers and will be available for the two weeks beginning August 5 only. No more work of this nature will be done in this county for at least one year.

Colored Woman Dies Under Farmer's Auto

Worton, Md., July 22.—George Rasin, promient Kent County farmer, ran over and killed Kate Dorsey, 45, colored, who had just alighted from an Atlantic City excursion train here at midnight and was walking home with three other colored residents of Butlertown, near here. Rasin is said to have pulled his automobile to the side of the road to avoid striking an oncoming car driven by William Turner, colored.

The woman was thrown to the concrete highway and died almost instantly. Her skull was fractured, her legs broken and she was injured internally. Coroner Harry L. Dodd, of this city, will conduct an investigation.

Furniture Plant Workers Confer

Special to The Washington Post.

Staunton, Va., July 22.—Indications are that there will be a lull before the expected renewal of hostilities in the controversy between the management and workers in the two furniture factories here and the third plant in Waynesboro.

Workmen called a meeting here tonight. A similar assemblage was held the first of last week. What happened then—the doors were closed to the press—remains a mystery, and what went on tonight is a further mystery.

One thing is known, however, and that is that it will be the last of the month, at least, until the men receive their charter from the National Furniture Workers Union. Armed with a charter, the next step on the part of the employes is problematical.

About 500 of the men in the three plants struck some weeks ago, remaining out about five days. They returned virtually on terms laid down by the owners.

POLLARD APPEALS TO BEDFORD VOTERS

Segregation Tax Law Cited as Triumph of Democrats.

SHORT BALLOT FAVORED

Special to The Washington Post.

Bedford, Va., July 22.—Dr. John Garland Pollard, candidate for governor, followed the outline of his original platform as the foundation for his speech delivered here this morning. He reviewed briefly the progress of the State under Democratic administration, claiming, as a portion of this program of progress, the passage of the segregation tax law, which he said saved the farmers of Bedford County more than $37,000 in taxes last year.

Effective administration of tax laws has brought a surplus to the State treasury, where formerly a deficit existed, Dr. Pollard said, and promised if elected to use his influence toward an economical use of these funds. He expressed himself as favoring measures which protect the wealth of the children of the State and larger State appropriations for the equalization of educational opportunities so that the children of the less wealthy may have the opportunity of a high-type education. He expressed his approval of the short ballot, declaring that the governor working under this ruling has less patronage than under the old order. He resented the terms "undemocratic," "autocratic" and "centralized," used by his opposing candidates in speaking of the short ballot.

He said Virginia had nothing to do with the selection of Raskob and asked the voters to turn their attention from the unpleasantness of last fall to State affairs and to cast their vote in the coming primary.

Dr. Pollard was introduced by State Senator Hunter Miller and his address was delivered in the courthouse.

Richmond, Va., July 22 (A.P.).—Commenting on a statement of the Rev. David Hepburn, superintendent of the Antisaloon League of Virginia, John Garland Pollard, a Democratic candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, said here late this afternoon that he does not desire the primary vote of any person who does not intend to abide by the result of the primary August 6 and support its nominees.

Hepburn, an active anti-Smith Democrat during the last presidential campaign, issued a statement last Saturday in which he contended that participation in the Democratic primary does not constitute an obligation, legal or moral, to support the nominee of the primary in the general election.

"Rookie" Company Acquires Honors

Harrisonburg, Va., July 22.—Fatigued and bronzed after two weeks of army life at Camp Byrd, Virginia Beach, the Spotswood Guards, Co. C, 116th Infantry, Virginia National Guard, returned home last night in high spirits over the fine record made by the "rookie" outfit at the annual encampment.

The Spotswood Guards won the regimental banner for keeping the neatest company street at the camp, had one member qualify as a member of the Virginia National Guard team at the national rifle matches to be held in Ohio, and had the champion bugler of the camp.

Sergt. Marcus Leffel, with an average of 95, won a place on the State rifle team, while Austin Loewner was adjudged the best bugler in the camp.

Dairy Destroyed By $40,000 Fire

Valuable Cattle Saved as Flames Raze Barns Near Herndon.

Special to The Washington Post.

Herndon, Va., July 22.—Fire of undetermined origin swept the dairy and hay barns at Sterling Farm Dairy here late this afternoon, doing damage of approximately $40,000. The dairy is owned by Dr. Albert Shaw, publisher, of New York City. All the stock, except a valuable bull and two heifers, were saved by the farm employes.

The blaze broke out in the hay barn just at milking time. The Herndon Fire Department was called and arrived in time to prevent the burning of the residence and several smaller buildings on the farm. The Leesburg fire fighting equipment arrived a short while later and helped extinguish the fire.

Man Dies From Blow Attributed to Fight

Special to The Washington Post.

Lynchburg, Va., July 22.—Meager details are available here of the trouble which led up to the killing of Leonard Carr, 35, of Amherst County, who died Sunday in Lynchburg Hospital from a fractured skull. It is said he was injured in a fight Saturday night near Woodson, in Nelson County, 50 miles from here. Carr is survived by his widow and two children.

VIRGINIA UNIVERSITY BUILDINGS CHANGED

MORE SPACE OBTAINED

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., July 22.—When the scattered units of the department of medicine of the University of Virginia were gathered together into the new $1,400,000 medical building four old laboratories were vacated. This summer these are being remodeled for the different university departments that will occupy them in the fall.

Anatomy Hall will be turned over to the division of extension when the renovation has been completed. This building, better known as "Stiff Hall," is conveniently located between Peabody Hall and the biology building.

For several years the laboratories of bacteriology and pathology were located in the ground floor of Fayerweather Hall. The schools of art and architecture, which have been using the upper floors, will take over the entire building for next session. This will give much more space for the teaching of the fine arts.

The Virginia Quarterly Review will be given the old building at the end of West Range that was used for physiology and physiological chemistry. The school of forestry and the State forestry department will move from the crowded biology building into the upper floor of Cabell Hall, where once were the laboratories of histology and embryology. This will give extra space for the teaching of botany and zoology in the Miller school of biology.

The division of extension will have much more space than is provided by the present quarters which this department occupies in Peabody Hall. The old anatomy building includes two large units used as laboratories with connecting space between.

The reception room for the extension division will be arranged at the entrance to the older of these units, with the office of the chief clerk adjoining. In the center will be an open space for the stenographers and in the rear three offices, one to be occupied by George B. Zehmer, director of the department, one by George W. Eutsler, his assistant, and another by some other official on the extension staff.

Charles H. Kauffman, executive secretary of the Virginia High School Literary and Athletic League, will have his office adjoining the second unit of the building.

Youth, 18, Near Death After Shooting Affray

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 22.—Marshall McDonald, 18-year-old quarry worker, of Engle, Jefferson County, W. Va., is at the point of death in the Charles Town General Hospital as a result of a shooting affray at Engle Saturday night, and Connie Jack, Virginia negro, 18, is in the Jefferson County Jail, charged with the shooting.

The negro is alleged to have fired three bullets from a 32-caliber revolver at McDonald, one of them lodging in the youth's liver, the other two going wild. The shooting is said to have been the culmination of an altercation between the two youths two nights previous, during which McDonald is alleged to have hit the negro with a rock.

Couple of Lynchburg Wed in Lawn Ceremony

Lynchburg, Va., July 22.—Miss Katherine Merdenach Foster, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Junius P. Foster, and William Goode Robinson, both of this city, were married Saturday evening on the lawn of the home of the bride's parents, 1303 Madison street, the celebrant being Dr. T. Clagett Skinner, pastor of the First Baptist Church.

Miss Winifred M. Baxter played the wedding music and the bride was given in marriage by her father, the ring ceremony being used. Joseph Robinson, the bridegroom's brother, was best man, and Miss Marguerite Foster, the bride's sister, was maid of honor.

After an informal reception, Mr. and Mrs. Robinson went for a bridal trip by motor, their destination being unannounced.

Mrs. J. P. Kiracofe Laid To Rest in Churchville

Staunton, Va., July 22.—Funeral services for Mrs. J. P. Kiracofe, 74, who died Saturday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. H. E. Baylor, of Valley Mills, were held at the Loch Willow Presbyterian Church this morning at 11 o'clock. The Rev. Dr. William C. White, her pastor, was in charge, assisted by the Rev. W. C. Jamison, of Hebron Church. Burial was in Green Hill Cemetery, Churchville.

Mrs. Kiracofe, whose husband died in February, is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Baylor and Mrs. Blair Brown, both of Valley Mills, and one brother, C. F. Perry, of Mount Solon.
